HELENE NORRIS' ANSWERS

Japanese Toweling.

N.—The Japanese toweling which is so popular for scarves, table runners, curtains and other decorative purposes, comes in such a narrow width that the problem of joining it attractively often prevents its use. One clever woman solved the problem of making a piece of Japanese toweling into a scarf that would fit the top of the bedroom furniture. A strip of cross-barred muslin was added to form a border. It was seamed on the right side and the edge was also turned up on the right side. A narrow "twist" was stitched over the joining of the seams and the same kind of "twist" was sewed over the turned back edge. The effect of the bordered center and the barred border afforded a very pleasant contrast.

flowers stand out in high relief, but are entirely different from padded satin stitch. It is a very quick and successful way to develop the petals of a small flower. The stem and leaves are outlined with a fine needle, the leaves being filled with seedings.

Couch Cover.

Mrs. A. J. R.—Perhaps the most serviceable couch covers for summer use are those made of coarse linen, which may be blue, brown, gray or green, according to the decorative effect you wish to secure.

These covers are finished with a plain hem about two inches deep. If a little decoration is desired, a border design, above the hem done in darned embroidery, would be suitable and attractive if carried out in the soft-toned colors of the linen with a few touches of brighter color to afford a contrast. A three-inch band of bright cretonne could be substituted for the embroidery. A couch cover seen the other day, which served for all-year wear, was made of brown arras cloth of a rough weave and texture. It was finished with a narrow gold band above the hem.

To Transfer Designs.

Mrs. R. W.—Perforated patterns are not sold, as the designs are drawn so that they can be transferred directly from the paper by means of an impression sheet.

To transfer, lay the impression paper right side down on the material, over it place the pattern, securely fasten, so it will not slip, and trace the entire design with a sharp hard pencil. The pattern will then be transferred ready to embroider.

Impression paper can be purchased in any art or stationery store. One sheet will transfer a great number of designs, as it can be used again and again, until worn out.

Rambler Rose

The leaves are solid and use the Rambler rose for the flowers. One method of working the latter is to begin in the center by making several French knots, then work around them with stitches similar to outline, in each row use a longer stitch. Usually the center is of a dark shade and a lighter tone used for the outer stitches.

In the second row, use a single initial or monogram in the large circle, if only one letter is used it should be two inches high. The letters are y—b—x the tiny circles are to be worked either in eyelet or solid, the stems in outline and the leaves and edge in buttonhole stitch.

As the design is used only on the one end of the towel, for the other end use only the leaves or sections of them, and whatever portion of the stems needed for the edge of the towel.

That is of punched work the flowers in this design may be worked in the "lazy daisy" stitch, making a loop on each of the lines radiating from the center of the "wheel forms".

Split Satin Stitch.
The beauty of the split satin stitch consists in keeping the center of dividing line perfectly straight.

To Embroider Small Flowers.
A. O. S.—A very simple way to embroider the small daisies is by means of the appraised stitch, which consists of laying the floss lengthwise of the petals instead of crosswise. The flowers do not require any padding, as they are made with six-stranded cotton. All the strands are threaded into the needle and a stitch is taken from the base to the tip of the petal. Then a stitch is taken on either side from the base to just below the top, and if the marked outline is not covered, then another stitch is taken at each side. These little

NEEDLE NOTES FOR NIMBLE FINGERS

SEWING SHIRT FABRICS

To the inexperienced seamstress making small seams look smooth is a problem when the material is smooth. It is necessary to cut the stuff very close and smooth before putting the seams together. First overcast them closely, then turn them over, crease down to make them flat and then sew the French or double seam as close to the edge as possible to make as small a seam as possible. The fine thread in a fine needle for this second sewing.

WASHABLE CREPE WAISTERS

For summer coats and wrappers for the baby, there is nothing sweeter than dainty, little garments of cotton or silk crepe of pink, blue or white with collar and cuffs of figured white in some of the small French flowered designs. Sometimes the wrapper is of the figured material with a white collar.

SUMMER HANDKERCHIEFS

Nowadays the width of the handkerchief's hem does not matter, but wholly a matter of individual taste. The woman who carries an inch and a half broad hemmed mouchoir is quite as smart as the one who affects quarter-inch-wide hems. But the linen must be of the an crepe, and the pattern of the initial is important. On the wide hemmed handkerchief the letter is embroidered on the hem in one corner and on the narrow hemmed mouchoir the initial appears just within the angle or else within a floral garland or wreath. Morning handkerchiefs—the sort used for shopping, travelling and many informal occasions—are bordered or initial-embroidered in color. Some of these bordered affairs are actually plaided. Not in the class manner, to be sure, but they have in white with blue, pink

A NEW IDEA IN LUNCHEON COVERS

At a recent luncheon the guests were interested and charmed by the entirely different effect the table presented. Instead of the usual elaborate lunch cloth or the round centerpieces and runners, this table had a covering that was a combination of centerpieces and runners. The material was a heavy, imported linen, the kind woven with a round thread, and the way it was cut was the unusual feature. The center was a Maltese cross, the circle in the middle forming the centerpiece; the four arms making the runners. Between the arms two daisies were placed for the guest who sat there, so that the table decorated eight. The circle was left plain in the center, but was heavily embroidered close to its edges, and the same conventional pattern was repeated across the straight ends of the arms of the cross. These ends were also finished with linen Cluny lace. The design was worked solid in heavy white luster cotton. The daisies matched as well as laid on each arm of the cross as well as between the arms. This had some and original luncheon set can be made in natural-color linen and embroidered in two—idea of Delft. It can also be embroidered in white and then outlined in blue.

Along the River of DOUBT

cheerful resignation to discomfort brings a reward in equal proportion. Theodore Roosevelt and his party touring South American wilds encountered discomforts at every turn. Here he was pestered by man-eating fish who attacked his men in the water. There mosquitoes swarmed about him making his life a misery. Days under the dense growth of the Brazilian forest almost unbearable.

Vampire bats assailed the party, biting their draught oxen by sucking blood from their bodies. These bats inflicted their bites painlessly while on the wing. They would soar above their prey and hover there, waiting in a circle, creating a soothing breeze as they moved. Then they came down, like the devil, and bit the oxen to the bone. Men and children are bitten there at night and have been slowly bled to death without feeling any pain. Even when the blood-sucking vampires left, the wound did not hurt, because they were so deep.

The incision was so small, however, that the bats were enabled to pass the nerves as they bored into the flesh.

At times on the South American trip Roosevelt and his men brushed against trees, bringing down showers of venomous fire ants. Their bite was just the opposite of the vampire bat. It felt like a cinder on the skin and every wound left a stinging sore. The marshes swarmed with savage insects and it must be remembered that the ex-President traveled a good deal of the time through marshy land. These savage insects left fever or dysentery. Then there were jaguars, peccaries and snakes scattered through the marshy forest land.

Roosevelt's trip up the Paraguay River and from thence across to the Amazon recalls his claim to the discovery of the River of Doubt. His claims are now accepted by geographers, but when they were first presented it will be remembered that geographers pointed out that the watershed between the Rio de la Plata and the Amazon was a lowland and that during many months of the year one could ride in a canoe from the headwaters of one river to the headwaters of another on the marsh water from the heavy rains of that remarkably rainy region. They thought the river a myth.

That is the greatest insect paradise in the world. Along this "River of Doubt" geographers have long known that the most wonderful insect life exists. There is no other land in the world where the possibilities for such life can be found.

But the River of Doubt is not a stream that would tempt the daring swimmers of our own temperate zone. For in these waters live the alligator. But there is still a deadlier peril in the waters than the alligator. That is the piranha. It is a fish no bigger than a good sized trout, but it is a terror of the River of Doubt and other South American streams. One night after an all-day march the party stopped beside the river and a 12-year-old native boy, who, with his father, had marched through the day with the party, went out to swim in the river.

In an instant the boy was bitten by the deadly piranha, which tore the boy to pieces. The fish ascended quietly from the bottom of the stream. It is much more to be dreaded than the alligator, because it cannot be seen while the alligator can be seen from the surface.

RIVER OF DOUBT CALIPH HARMFUL.

Besides the piranha there is the South American catfish. It is demon of the water and attacks bathers. They are not so much feared as the piranha, however. The piranha swims in schools. When one tastes blood it goes into a diabolical fury and incites the others to attack the victim. All pounce on the swimmer and life is soon extinct.

It takes a man of considerable resolution to enter a land like that, yet it takes great courage to go on. But for every evil, however, there are good things. There are such gorgeously colored birds and insects. Hummingbirds, for example, are the delight of all who see them. The dangers add to the spice of the undertaking and boys pay for the dangers twice over. Roosevelt brought back with him photographs and specimens far more wonderful than any he brought from Africa. Africa abounds in bigger animals. There are no lions in South America. But Africa cannot boast such wonderfully colored birds and insects.

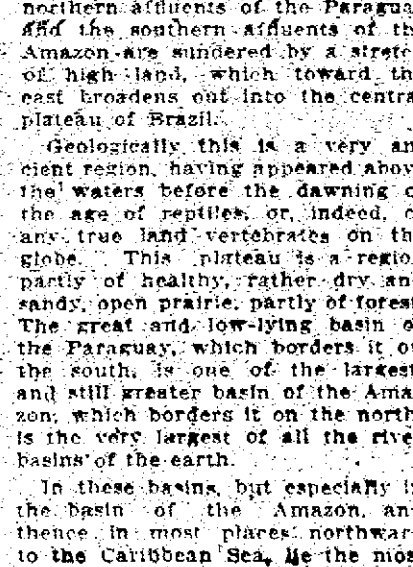

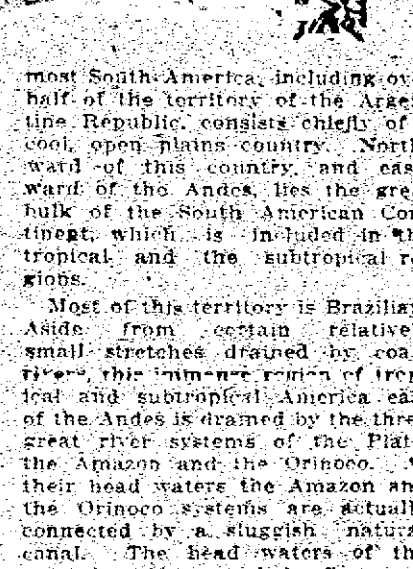

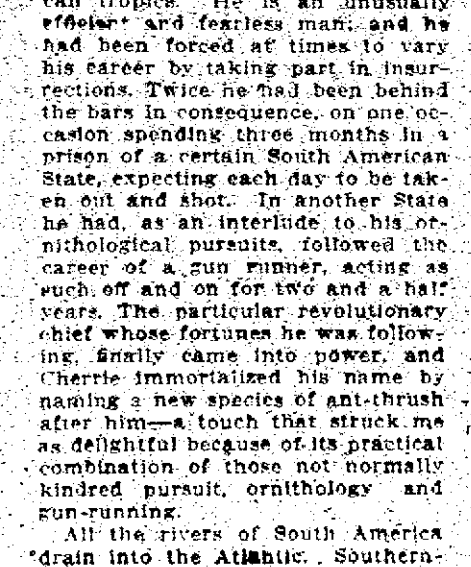

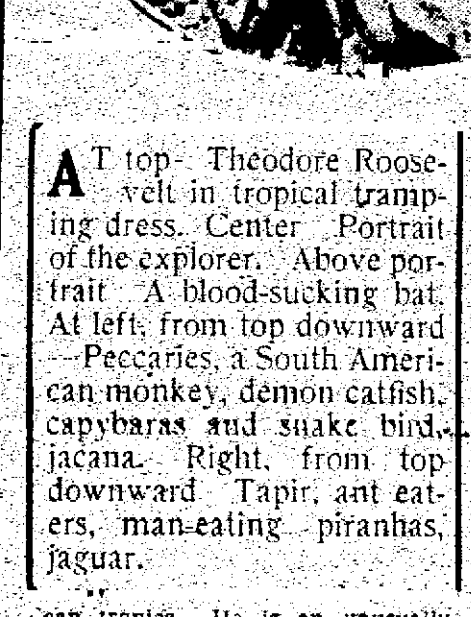

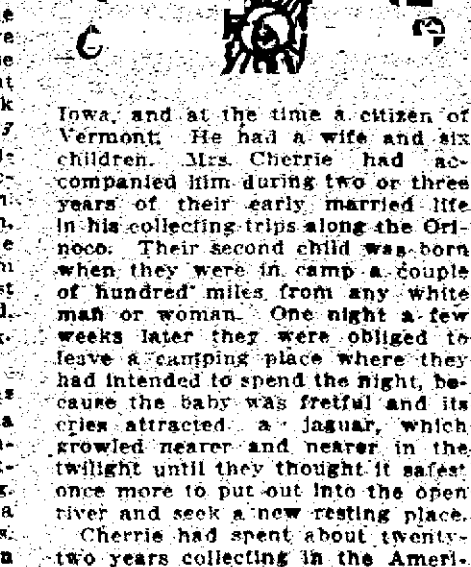

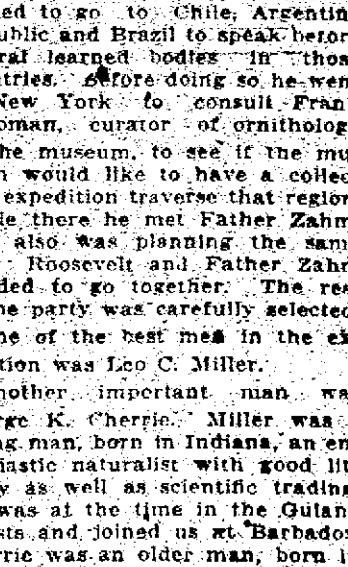

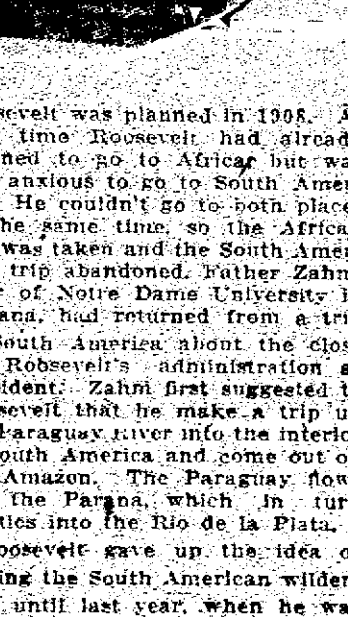

The men traveled across the divide from the Rio de la Plata valley to the valley of the Amazon he encountered colonies of black and golden orioles, entering and leaving nests built over the water, so constructed that the monkeys could not reach them. The monkeys delight in the taste of eggs of orioles and in the taste of the young of that species. These birds suspend their nests so far that the monkeys cannot reach them. Besides the monkeys are cowards near water and when they get out on the branches overhanging the River of Doubt the branches begin to sink toward the stream until the monkey, fearing he will drown, scampers back to safety.

Along the river bank are flocks of noisy and gaudily colored macaws, blue and red and yellow. There are parrots in every color of every flag of the world. There are toucans and jacararas. Scarlet ibises, flamingoes, jabirus and snowy curlews live the banks of that river about which a doubt as to its existence has been raised. Then there are snake birds or darters, the most primitive members of the goose family. The birds of North America are found in these darkened jungle regions, but in highly exaggerated form. They are relatives of the birds of our own country and are more highly colored. There is a plover of that country, which walks on the leaves

Man Eating Fish, Blood Sucking Vampires and Spider Monkeys Infest Much Talked of Stream, Roosevelt Put on the Map in South America.

AT top—Theodore Roosevelt in tropical tramping dress. Center—Portrait of the explorer. Above portrait—A blood-sucking bat. can tropics. He is an unusually cheerful and fearless man, and he had been forced at times to vary his career by taking part in insurrections. Twice he had been behind the bars in consequence, on one occasion spending three months in a prison of a certain South American State, expecting each day to be taken out and shot. In another State he had, as an interlude to his ornithological pursuits, followed the career of a gun runner, acting as such off and on for two and a half years. The particular revolutionary chief whose fortunes he was following, finally came into power, and Roosevelt immortalized his name by naming a new species of ant-thrush after him—a touch that struck me as delightful because of its practical combination of those not normally kindred pursuits, ornithology and gun-running.

All the rivers of South America drain into the Atlantic. Southernmost South America, including over half of the territory of the Argentine Republic, consists chiefly of a cool, open, hilly country. Northward of this country, and eastward of the Andes, lies the great bulk of the South American continent, which is included in the tropical and the subtropical regions.

Most of this territory is Brazilian. Aside from certain relatively small stretches drained by coast rivers, this immense region of tropical and subtropical America east of the Andes is drained by the three great river systems of the Plate, the Amazon and the Orinoco. At their head waters the Amazon and the Orinoco systems are actually connected by a sluggish "natural canal." The head waters of the northern affluents of the Paraguay and the southern affluents of the Amazon are situated by a stretch of high land, which toward the east broadens out into the central plateau of Brazil.

Geologically this is a very ancient region, having appeared above the waters before the dawning of the age of reptiles, or, indeed, of any true land vertebrates on the globe. This plateau is a region partly of healthy, rather dry and sandy, open prairie, partly of forest. The great and low-lying basin of the Paraguay, which borders it on the south, is one of the largest, and still greater basin of the Amazon, which borders it on the north, is the very largest of all the river basins of the earth.

In these basins, but especially in the basin of the Amazon, and thence in most places northward to the Caribbean Sea, lie the most extensive stretches of tropical forest to be found anywhere. The forest of tropical West Africa and of portions of the Farther Indian region are the only ones that can be compared with them.

Much difficulty has been experienced in exploring these forests, because under the torrential rains, and towering just the rank growth of vegetation, becomes almost impenetrable, and the streams difficult of navigation; while white men suffer much from the terrible insect scourges and the deadly diseases which modern science has discovered to be due very largely to insect bites. The fauna and flora, however, are of great interest. This American Museum was particularly anxious to obtain collections from the divide between the head waters of the Paraguay and the Amazon, and from the southern affluents of the Amazon.

The Car-Seat Problem.

When Danvers and his friend Barlow came into the car Danvers was talking:

"I have come to the conclusion," he said, "that the only Christian way for people to get about New York in these crowded cars is to stand up in relays. It looks hog-wash for one lot of passengers to occupy all the seats all the time. There ought to be a general shaking up every five minutes and give the stragglers a chance to rest."

"It wouldn't work," said Barlow. "It would turn out like every other altruistic scheme. Some generous souls would be giving up their seats all the time and others would be sitting still all the time, waiting for somebody else to do his duty. And besides, nobody would have nerve enough to qualify his offer with the five minutes' conditional clause."

"I would," said Danvers, "and the first chance I get I am going to test the scheme and see how it works."

He found a chance before he got home. Somewhere in the street car district two women came into the car. One of them sat down beside Danvers, the other, finding no vacant seat, stood in front of him. Barlow nudged him maliciously. "Now is your opportunity," he whispered.

Danvers sat still for a few minutes, watching the woman's swaying, lurching figure. Presently he said:

"Madam, I will give you this seat and let you rest a while if you will promise to give it back to me at the end of five minutes."

The woman lunged helplessly into Danvers' lap.

"I beg your pardon," she said. "That sudden turn—oh, yes, I'm all right now, thanks. What was it you said about five minutes?"

Danvers prepared his offer.

"That is very kind of you, I am sure," she said. "But I feel that I ought not to take the seat. It is you are ill and think you won't like standing more than five minutes at a time, perhaps you had better sit still."

Danvers blushed. "I feel well enough," he said. "But it is a condition of mine that no one who rides in these cars should be obliged to stand longer than five minutes at a stretch. Are you willing to accept this seat under these conditions?"

"Certainly," said the woman. "You are very thoughtful to offer it at all. What time is it now, please?"

"I haven't got my watch," Danvers replied as he checked the dancing strap. "But it doesn't matter. It will take no less than five minutes to get from the opera house to the car. I'll keep an eye open for that. When we get there I'll let you know, and you can give me a shove again."

"Very well," said the woman, and she resumed the interrupted conversation with her companion.

At thirty-fifth street there was a blockade. By the public clock in the neighborhood it lasted just twenty minutes. At the end of five minutes Danvers began to fidget. At the end of ten minutes his impatience became audible.

"Ah-o-o-o-o," he said. "Confoundably long wait this."

The woman checked her flow of speech.

"Have we got to the opera house yet?" she asked, innocently.

"To the opera house?" said Danvers. "Great Heavens, my haven! I hid an inch in ten minutes. How on earth did you expect us to get to the opera house?"

"Dear me," said the woman, "how provoking. These blockades do delay one so. When we got there let me know, please. If I don't happen to notice it myself, I promise you, remember, to let you sit down again when we get to the opera house."

Barlow snickered. "Yes, I remember," said Danvers.

Thirteen minutes later they reached the temple of music.

"Madam," said Danvers.

"Ah, here we are," said the woman. "She arose and Danvers sat down."

"Madam," he said. "You seemed to forget that there were two springs to our agreement, one relating to time, the other to place. You disregarded the first. You kept me standing something like twenty-five minutes. I shall be equally inconsiderate. I shall not relinquish this seat at the end of five minutes."

"Oh, that's all right," said the woman. "I get off at Forty-fourth street, anyway."

"What did I tell you?" said Barlow. "I told you you would get the worst of the bargain."

"I hadn't counted on blockades," said Danvers wearily. "The next time I'll take care not to mention particular corners, also not to make a bargain of any kind with a woman."

Quite Right.

Variation of the old saying, "Is that clock right?" "No, nothing in this place is right."

Punkah Willie's oldest sister was trying to find the correct time.

"Say," said she, "aren't any of the clocks right around this house?"

"Yes," answered P. W.'s youngest sister. "There's one right over there."

the officers of the army believe that all should be served according to their needs. When a man drinks up his money and comes to them down and out the Salvation Army takes care of him. When a man fails to support his family and the wife and babies are starving with the heat in summer, the Salvation Army takes the innocent sufferers to one of their fresh air camps, if possible, for a week or two in hot weather.

The Salvation Army gets financial aid from the rich as well as from the poor, but the majority of its contributions come in small sums. The money thrown on the drum on the streets at night, and the money gathered in saloons makes a considerable proportion of its support. The Salvation Army girl has no scruples of taking money when she goes out to get support for her cause. She passes force, which is working to destroy him and his business.

"They ought to pay it," said one Salvation Army girl, after accepting a contribution from a saloon keeper. "They give these men drink and ruin their souls. They ought to make amends and help us save them."

Earnestness is the chief requirement for admission to the Salvation Army. Anyone can volunteer if she wishes and will submit to the discipline of the organization. The soldier in the Salvation Army is subject to orders and is required to be absolutely obedient to the su-

When Klondike Pete, a half-breed gold hunter of Alaska and the British Northwest territory, entered the town of Coldfoot just south of the Endicott range in Northern Alaska, with his dog team one spring after having spent the winter snowbound in the mountain wastes, he drove up the streets of the town and met a little band of men and women with drums beating and flags flying.

Pete stopped in wonder. He had lived on the frontier all his life and had never heard of such an organization. The sun was sinking in the west as he halted his sins washed away.

Several other speeches were delivered and a girl with a regulation Salvation Army hat gave an invitation for all to throw their money on the drum. The drum was put down in the wet snow near Klondike Pete, and he watched in amazement the men from the saloon throwing their money down on the drum. All did not contribute, however, so the girl with the hat took a tambourine in her hand and marched around through the crowd inviting further contribution. Pete was the only one not to contribute. The girl looked at him quietly, but the look made Pete feel cheap. He tried to tell her that he had been snowbound all winter and had nothing to give but team before the little party, singing with all their might and beating drums.

Pete had intended finding the nearest saloon. He had been deprived of liquor all winter due to his remaining in the gold fields until the winter snows caught him. Now he was intending to make up for lost time, but the noisy party before him caught his attention and he turned his hungry dog eager for their evening meal up the street after the singing party. The dogs had lived on short rations all winter and so had Pete. His little fortune of gold, washed out of the creek at Klondike, was to have been spent for a little food for his dogs and a bit of comfort for himself, but here he was spellbound following the people singing songs with words the like of which he had never heard of before.

They stopped in front of the main saloon and while a crowd collected on the sidewalk they knelt in the snow, which was melting, and prayed.

Pete had heard prayers before and knew something about what they meant, but never before had he seen men and girls march out in the snow and pray. A crowd on the opposite side of the street in a saloon fled out and stood looking at the kneeling band. All were much impressed. This army was different from the missionaries who quietly entered the region and taught about God in a quiet voice in the Alaskan mining camps. This crowd sang in a loud voice and used the tunes of the mining camp, only putting words to them about the "blood of the Lamb."

Then a small man with the clothing of a miner, but with the cap of the Salvation Army, gave a short exhortation to those on the walk to shun the saloon and to have their his gold dust find of the summer before. Pete, who could talk loudest in the saloon, could say nothing as the girl looked at him. Finally he turned to his sledge, picked up his gold and tossed it on the drum.

"Hallelujah," shouted the girl, who realized what was in the package. "Hallelujah," shouted the rest in chorus.

PETE GOES BACK TO HUNT FOR GOLD.

At last accounts Pete had not joined the Salvation Army. He was deprived of his right to get on a big drunk, however, and before the snows had gone he was back in the mountains after more gold, having been grubstaked by a rich young adventurer from Seattle, who picked up the impetuous half breed as his partner.

The little band was only a branch of the Salvation Army. They had been in Alaska all winter and in the coldest weather had toured the inland mining towns, keeping men from spending their money in the saloons and compelling them to confess their sins before their Heavenly Father.

The story of Pete's remarkable performance spread far and wide through the Alaskan gold camps. It crossed the border into Canada and the summer tour of that branch of the Salvation Army was one of the most widely attended on record.

The story of Klondike Pete is told simply to illustrate the widespreadness of the operations of the followers of General Booth. There are several divisions of the Salvation Army independent of the London organization, but the army with headquarters in London is the most remarkable organization in the world.

They have a force in every land, working with people the churches do not reach. When the lumber camps of the Northwest close down for the annual Christmas spree, the Salvation Army sends out companies throughout the streets of Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and other Northwest cities to preach to the lumbermen and keep them from evil.

In every country the Salvation Army adopts some distinctive dress. The dress in America, Canada and Australia is practically the same as in England, yet there are some branches of the army in those countries where the army adopts a different uniform.

In the recent parade of the Salvation Army in London the most remarkable army ever assembled on earth marched through the streets, singing their songs and attracting general attention.

The plan of the Salvation Army is to let every nation work out its own salvation as much as possible. In India, China, Japan, South America and the islands of the South Pacific, missionaries organize an army and then let the natives do the work of converting their brothers.

Unlike religious teachers of other faiths, the Salvation Army does not require an education. Education is furnished in the Salvation Army halls. They prefer to have the poor, the outcast, the depraved and the down-trodden, become teachers to their friends after they have been converted. That probably is the reason the Salvation Army has such a strong hold in the poorer quarters of the cities.

While the dwellers in the slums question the motives of the ordinary minister of the gospel, the Salvation Army preacher commands respect because he is usually believed to be sincere.

BARRACKS MAINTAINED FOR POOR IN CITIES.

The Salvation Army has been accused of giving charity to those who are undeserving. It is a fact that little investigation is made of the reason for a beggar's poverty. As long as the army is able to support those who come to its doors

HOW TYPHOID IS CARRIED FOR MANY YEARS

Dr. Mazyck P. Racene, director of the Wisconsin State Laboratory of Hygiene, writes in the Journal of the American Medical Association as follows:

In the fall of 1910 Mr. A. moved from Minneapolis to the town of G. Wis., bringing with him his wife and three boys. He bought a farm four miles northeast of the village. Mr. A. had typhoid fever. About the time of moving to Wisconsin the eldest son had typhoid fever, and soon after the two other sons and their mother came down with the disease.

Mr. A. with his family, consisting of his wife, two boys and a girl, moved from Minnesota to Wisconsin about the same time, having purchased a farm in the immediate neighborhood of Mr. A. While the buildings on this place were being put in order Mr. A.'s family stayed at the home of Mr. A. with the apparent result that first the daughter and soon after Mr. B. and the two sons came down with typhoid fever.

In the fall of 1911 Miss C. a niece of Mr. A. came from St. Paul to teach in the public schools. She was in the habit of spending the week end at the house of Mr. A. After six weeks' residence in the town of G. she became ill with typhoid fever.

At the same time a sister of Mr. A. visited him and soon after returning to her home suffered from typhoid fever also.

About August 15, 1911, Mr. D. visited at the home of Mr. A. and took supper with him. September 20 Mr. D. entered a hospital with her collection basket around everywhere, giving everybody a chance to contribute. Entering a saloon at night, she marches fearlessly among the drunken men or the sober collection basket around everywhere, giving everybody a chance to contribute. Entering a saloon at night, she marches fearlessly among the drunken men or the so-having been sick for some days, and a diagnosis of typhoid fever was made. His illness began during the first week of September.

In the spring of 1912 two young men, E. and F., who were working at the home of Mr. A. both contracted typhoid fever.

In the fall of the same year Mrs. G., a sister of Mrs. A., accompanied all her son, spent a few weeks at the home of Mr. A. Soon after returning home both contracted typhoid fever.

In the latter part of 1912 or January, 1913, Mr. H., a brother of E., spent a night at the home of Mr. A. and twelve days afterward came down with typhoid fever.

In June, 1913, Miss I., a niece of Mr. A., living near him, suffered from typhoid fever. Here had been frequent visiting between the two families.

On or about October 15, 1913, Mr. J. took the Reverend K., his wife and two children to the home of Mr. A. for a visit. They did not take a meal at the house, but the children became hungry and cookies were handed. October 28, the Reverend K. bought butter from Mr. A. for table use, and on November 2 Mr. A. and family dined at the home of the Reverend K. On November 11 the two children of the Reverend K. became ill with typhoid fever, and on November 30 Mrs. K. and her husband also went down with the disease. Mrs. K. dying.

It thus appears that twenty-one cases of typhoid fever occurred among persons in this community, of those who had visited there, and all of them had been in contact for long, or shorter periods of time with Mr. A. Microscopic examination showed Mr. A. to be a "typhoid carrier."

Every effort has been made to exclude other sources of infection. The water supply of the town of G. was examined and found to be above suspicion. There was no typhoid fever in this community except among those persons who had been in contact with Mr. A. Admitting that a few of these cases are doubtful, it is nevertheless reasonable to conclude that a great majority of them were infected directly or indirectly from Mr. A.

By Repute Only.

"Thank you, sir," said counsel in the big will case. "Your memory for detail is one that might well be cultivated by other witnesses. And, sir, on behalf of the numerous relations of the testator who are present in court, I should like to thank you for the very flattering, though none the less truthful, description you have given of that esteemed gentleman now, alas, no more."

A murmur of applause went round the court.

"I presume, sir," continued counsel, "that you were very intimate with the testator during his lifetime?"

"No! That is, er, no!" answered the witness somewhat lamely. "In fact, I never saw him in my life!"

"But really, sir," commented the grieving barrister, "I fail to see how you could otherwise give such an accurate description of him if you never

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Bradstreet's says today:

"Influences arising out of the European war situation have been plainly patent in American affairs this week. Besides demoralizing the security, business and coffee markets, the European imbroglio has affected larger financial matters, while at the same time rendering it prudent for the country's leading stock exchange, as well as those of other cities, to suspend business on Friday.

"While it is too early as yet to define the full effects of European conditions upon domestic affairs, it is evident that new business in export grain has been brought to a standstill and cotton market matters are very unsettled.

"Failures this week in the United States were 228, against 248. Wheat exports, 736,891 bushels, against 6,775,173.

DUN'S REVIEW

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Dun's Review says today:

"A notable demonstration of the fundamental soundness of American finance was furnished this week when foreign conditions were extraordinarily critical. The European political complications caused acute unsettlement there and, as a precautionary measure, similar action at the leading centers abroad.

"Early investment buying and vigorous banking support testified to confidence in the situation here, and it was encouraging that money remained on a fairly stable basis.

"The lack of affairs is still forward. Failures this week were 325, against 255 last year. In Canada, 42 against 30. Bank clearings, $2,568,096,581, an increase of 8.6 per cent.

CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—Wheat transactions halted to a great extent today, awaiting the outcome of a movement to give exports from the United States the protection of the American flag. After relatively narrow changes, the market closed steady, 3c net lower for near-by deliveries and 1c to 1 1/2c up for the more deferred options. Corn finished at an advance of 1 1/2 to 3c above last night; oats with a rise of 3/4 to 1 1/2c, and provisions higher by 2 1/2 to 15c.

Hysteria vanished today from the wheat pit. Anxiety in regard to settlements for July contracts was a thing of the past, and it was evident that, for the time being, war news no matter how exciting, would not affect the market with any such violence as had been the case during the preceding four days. Rumors that Italy might refuse to be drawn into the war tended to ease prices early, but an upward turn followed on account of increasing belief that a way soon would be found to allow foreign-built ships to take American registry.

Removal of the French import duty on wheat had considerable to do with helping to garden prices in the last hour of the session. There also was a growing prospect that Russia soon would place an embargo on exports, a course which would be likely to make the call of other countries for American wheat imperative.

Buying of corn noticeably slackened today, despite the requirement of unusually heavy margins on all trades.

Oats, like corn, developed fair activity and advanced irregularly in sympathy with other principal feed grains.

Urgent covering by shorts straightened the provision market. Packers also were credited with having taken a hand at buying.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—On the financial markets of the world was focused the full effect of the week's rapid spread of the war cloud. While diplomats discussed and generals planned, the money markets acted. Symptoms of the markets were so paroxysmal as to paint a vision of the breaking down of European civilization itself. The warning there pointed to a catastrophe so grave as to carry the strongest incentive in itself to avert it.

Credits, international exchanges and commerce were disorganized.

This said nullified all other considerations. No parallel exists for the jump from 4 to 5 per cent made by the Bank of England discount rate on Friday, thus marking the exigency of the crisis.

The flight of wheat prices measured the return to American producers, computed from the year's enormous yield and the world's urgent necessity. Owing to the close of the stock exchange, and the lateness in the week of the announcement, the interstate commission's rate decision made little impression in the financial district.

severe break which carried prices 1 1/2 lower on the declaration of neutrality issued by Italy and buyers withdrew. This decline was followed by a sharp recovery, and the market was closed at the level of the previous day.

The spot market was strong with cargoes at 2 1/2 to 3 advance and the fact that heavy purchases are in order.

At the close the market was excited, showing a sharp advance from the low of the morning but 2 1/2 lower than yesterday.

Corn opened nominal and later prices broke sharply, showing declines from yesterday of 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 with September selling at 5 1/2, 1 1/2.

The influence was entirely with wheat and the break in Buenos Ayres. At the close prices were 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 off from yesterday.

FINANCIAL BULLETINS

PARIS, Aug. 1.—The Bank of France today raised its discount rate from 4 1/2 to 5 per cent and its rate for loans from 5 1/2 to 7 per cent. The bourse was open but there was no quotations.

BERLIN, Aug. 1.—The bank rate of the Imperial Bank of Germany was raised to 6 per cent today. The rate of interest for private loans was raised to 6 per cent.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 1.—The National bank raised its discount rate from 5 to 6 per cent.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 1.—The bank rate of the Netherlands has been increased from 4 1/2 to 5 per cent.

"AFTER US THE DELUGE"

THE monarchs of Europe have invited universal destruction with a spirit seemingly as blithe as that of Louis XV. of France when he calmly watched the gathering storm of revolution and remarked, "After me the deluge." But the late lamented Bourbon had at least one advantage over the rulers of Europe today; he was confident that the storm would not break in his time, and he wasn't worrying over the fate of his successor.

The German Kaiser is the central figure in the present situation. If one considers only the matter of military aggrandizement, it is easy to justify his course in declaring war against Russia and sending an ultimatum to France which virtually amounts to the same thing. In every sense Germany is stronger today than ever before, stronger in its military and naval power, stronger commercially and in the various other particulars which go to make up the sum total of the word "prestige."

Russia is not prepared for such a conflict, for she has not recovered from the effects of the war with Japan. Her finances are disorganized, her army is at best a questionable factor, and her navy is almost negligible. France is in better condition, but is no more capable of dealing with Germany single-handed than at any other time since the debacle of 1871. And England is torn with internal dissension.

From the German standpoint all of these conditions are propitious. If the Kaiser is by force of arms, to make himself the dominant personality in Europe, now would seem to be the time to strike the blow. And when peace comes out of the chaos, if his alliance is victorious, depend on it he will collect a pretty penny from Austria in payment for his support.

But that is only one side of the question of the Kaiser's responsibility, a sordid, material program which ignores the higher welfare of humanity completely. Suppose Germany with her tremendous influence in every European chancellery, an influence founded on wholesome fear, had announced flatly that she would adhere to this program, namely, pledge herself to require Austria to withdraw from Serbia after merely punishing that country for the assassination of the crown prince.

This would have sufficed to prevent a Russian movement against Austria, for it would have been assurance that not a foot of Serbian territory would be added to Austria as a permanent conquest. It is clear that Russia does not want war, and undoubtedly the Czar would have refrained from a military demonstration against Austria if he had had this assurance from Germany. And by the same token there would have been no occasion whatever for Great Britain, France and Italy to interfere. Indeed, all of them have tried desperately to avoid war.

Perhaps it is unwise to base a definite conclusion on such meager and conflicting information as has come from Europe, but as the case stands it is plain that the German emperor has assumed a fearful responsibility in plunging Europe into what cannot but be the most terrible war in the history of civilization.

CARELESS MOTOR-DRIVING

THIS happened in Colorado Springs one day last week: A big seven-passenger motor car crossed Pikes Peak Avenue and Tejon in the middle of the afternoon when the traffic was heaviest. In the driver's seat was a young woman, but her hands were not on the wheel. No, dear reader, the wheel was held and the car guided by a four-year-old child who sat on the young woman's lap. And they glided blissfully past the traffic policeman, continuing their way down Tejon Street without mishap.

Providence was good to that young woman, and to everybody else who came within her radius of action, which means everybody she passed on the street. Of course it would be easy to say that if danger had threatened she could have seized the wheel and guided the car safely. Perhaps she could, and perhaps she couldn't. She might not have seen the threatening danger in time. Suppose her four-year-old pupil had run down a pedestrian or smashed the car into another vehicle, there would have been a howl of public indignation over such idiotic recklessness. But this case is not exceptional, for the next day a man was seen driving a car on Pikes Peak Avenue with a baby sitting on the wheel facing him. In this case the baby was not driving the car, but imagine the troubles that man might have had managing the car in a tight place under such circumstances.

A "Safety First Society" has been formed in New York to combat the various phases of motor lunacy which daily result in serious accidents. It has distributed broadcast-a-card which reads:

- MOTORISTS
Carafirst First Means Safety Always
1. Be Considerate.
  2. Go Slow.
  3. Passing Children.
  4. Passing Vehicles.
  5. Around Corners.
  6. Approaching Crossings.
  7. Stop.
  8. At Railroad Crossings.
  9. Behind Street Cars Taking on or Discharging Passengers.
  10. Use Tire Chains on Wet and Slippery Pavements.
  11. Better Be Safe Than Sorry.

That is a good motto "Better be safe than sorry." If the scores of careless drivers in Colorado Springs, many of whom, mostly visitors, seemingly do not know the rules of the road, would adhere to it there would be fewer accidents.

90 IN THE SHADE

THOSE who have had the good fortune to live in Colorado some time have almost forgotten what it means to live in a country where the thermometer runs 90 or more in the shade for days at a time. Yet there are thousands of unfortunate persons who endure such suffering every summer. A large proportion of them have neither the price nor the energy to seek more favorable climes, but there are many who would make the change if they knew of the promised land.

Moderate temperatures, where the mercury has neither chills nor fever, are essential to bodily comfort and mental poise. Under such conditions men do their best work. The Esquimo hunts walrus, catches fish and eats blubber, and that is the end of his aspirations. It is too cold to think of anything else. The negro of the tropics lolls away his time on a mossy bank. He picks a banana or a coconut when it is time to eat and sleeps on a bed of reeds. An occasional hunting trip when meat is needed completes the cycle of his existence. Old Sol thus limits his endeavor.

The people of the temperate zones have freer choice. They have the work of the world to do and of all these peoples none have the advantage of those who live in this fortunate climate. It is not enough that we should enjoy these advantages ourselves, we should tell others that they may share them with us.

NOW FOR THE EXODUS

AN interesting effect of the European war upon the United States will be the exodus of a large portion of our foreign-born population. When the Balkan war began two years ago it was nothing less than amazing to see how readily the Serbs, Bulgars and Greeks in this country dropped everything and rushed to the aid of their countrymen. It is naturally to be expected that they, and the Europeans of other nationalities, will now do the same thing.

According to the last Federal census there are 610,000 Austrian, and 235,000 Hungarian, men in this country. The number of Serbs is given as 3,331, but most of them have probably already returned. Of Russians, there were, in 1910, 737,000; Italians, 713,000; Frenchmen, 95,000; Roumanians, 28,000; Bulgars, 10,000; and there were 4,500 men from little Montenegro. Of Germans there were 1,378,000, but most of these are doubtless American citizens whose ties with the fatherland are hardly strong enough to draw them back to fight. The Austrian ambassador says there are 200,000 men of the Austrian reserve here and subject to call.

If these figures are authoritative the European war might easily drain this country of a half million men, an effect which would have an important influence on the labor market.

WAR.
To the Editor of The Gazette:
"War would demand of us an enormous sacrifice

in life and property; but we shall show our enemies what it means to provoke Germany."
This reads like the threat of an angry school boy, but it is reported to have emanated from the emperor of Germany!

What war mean any less for Russia, France, England or any other people than Germany?

More than one individual has exclaimed "War is hell!"

Whatever the cause of war, the participants have to shake hands sooner or later—why not sooner?

"Why do the heathen rage?" Perhaps because they do not know any better, but why do so-called Christian nations rage?

There can be only one answer—because they are not Christians.

Colorado Springs, Aug. 1.

WAR OR PEACE.

To the Editor of The Gazette:
Our advocates of a strong army and navy constantly assert that the best guarantee of peace is to be prepared for war.

That this is one of the devil's own lies the present situation in Europe clearly demonstrates.

Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and Denmark, with practically no means of defense, are secure and tranquil, while the nations that have prepared for war are now pallid with fear of war. With England, Germany, France and Italy the more armaments have been piled on armaments the greater has become the feeling of insecurity. All Europe has grown, as it were, a powder-mill, where such a small spark as the Austrian-Serbian quarrel may cause an explosion unpeepably disastrous.

To prepare for war is not to prevent war, but to provoke war. The truth is that war in our day is the logical result of preparation for war. If, like Tatty Comam, the jingo nations had to count 10 before yielding to the war fever—that is to say, had to make preparation for war before beginning it—the folly and absurdity of any war would be realized before preparations were finished. Modern nations will not of cold blood and premeditation declare war for modern war costs too much in every way.

In connection with this matter of peace and war, there are other hoary lies generally accepted. Here is one—Man is a fighting animal and you cannot change human nature.

Man was a fighting animal in the age of savagery, but in our day he has become a social animal, recognizing social obligations, and his natural struggle now is not with his fellow man, but with nature and environment for better conditions of life. The progress of civilization has changed human nature. But why combat? There is not a single argument to justify war or preparation for war that has not long since lost its force and been refuted. All civilized nations are now so closely knit together socially, commercially and in every other way that war is a public crime, and I trust it will not be long until the concert of nations will so recognize it and suppress it. Like Jack Sheppard, we will have peace if we have to fight for it.

J. E. FRANKLIN.
Colorado Springs, Aug. 1.

NOT A MATTER OF PHILANTHROPY

From the Louisville Courier-Journal (Dem.)
That which the Courier-Journal has condemned in the course pursued by the administration at Washington—aside from an incoherence which has placed us in a false position in the world of nations—is the altruism that we love the Mexicans and that it is our mission to establish liberty, fraternity and land reform in Mexico.

If we had attained the perfection of government and civilization in our own country, we could scarcely hope to establish it in an alien land. Sixty years of arms. If the president had a thousand years to live and to remain in power, and confined himself to the preaching of the new freedom, it is unlikely that he would make any general impression upon the Mexicans. Philanthropy, like charity, should not only begin at home, but it should not abate, or divide its energies until it has reached its ideal.

Statesmanship is not philanthropy. It is the science of material things having two departments, one relating to domestic affairs, and the other relating to foreign affairs. When houses burn theories about fire extinguishers are out of the question.

From the humanitarian point of view the best thing that could happen to the Mexicans would be to let us take them in out of the weather of helplessness and subjugation—out of the rain of blood and blood money—to annex them in Sonora and Chihuahua, as we annexed them in Texas and Arizona. In Lower as in Upper California and New Mexico. Inevitably that will be the end of it.

'Talks on Thrift

(American Bankers Association)

Series of 1914

THRIFT AND THE MOVIES.

"The American people dislike to be told that they are not thrifty, but they are in the extreme. They know how to make money, but they do not know how to spend it or to save it."—L. P. Behrens, President California Bankers Association.

The moving picture theater is to be used as an agency to direct thought toward thrift.

As part of its campaign of education to offset extravagance and inculcate the more sensible ideas of thrift, the savings bank section of the American Bankers Association has adopted a two-reel moving picture film, the story for which was written under the direction of the association. This will be released to the public September 15th.

The film is called "The Rewards of Thrift," and is a product of the Vitaphone company of America. It cost several thousand dollars to create.

The picture shows the virtues of a thrifty structure, and how thrift during prosperity times can be an advantage. There is a "bad man," who is finally converted to thrift by the hero, despite the fact this man once attempted the hero's life.

Actual scenes of work on a steel framed skyscraper and in callous under-comprized air are shown, as well as actual scenes in the school savings bank, the real savings bank, where a former is arrested by means of the finger print method of identification, and the building and loan association, all presented in a dramatic setting which grips the attention and leaves the desired impression.

Do not fail to see "The Rewards of Thrift" when it is presented in any motion picture theater in your neighborhood. It will interest you and benefit you immensely.

If you are a parent, take your son and your daughter to see this strong object lesson, which is just what the rising generation needs in these times.

T. D. MACGONIGAL.

SCRIPTURE

GALATIANS 1:1-5.

Paul, an apostle, (not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead.)

And all the brethren which are with me, unto the churches of Galatia.

Grace be to you, and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ.

Who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God our Father:

To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

"Pollyanna. The Glad Book," by Eleanor H. Porter. Net. $1.25. (The Page Co. publishers, Boston.)

Pollyanna is a tale of a young orphan girl who transforms the stiff and dull home of her maiden aunt. Pollyanna is a bright, lovable girl who introduces the doctrine that everybody should be glad and carries it out in the most optimistic way. It is a good book for children as well as mature readers and is full of real human nature.

"The Golden Road," by L. M. Montgomery. Net. $1.25. (The Page Co. Boston.)

In "The Golden Road" the reader is taken back to familiar ground and meets well known and well loved characters which endeared themselves to the reading public in "The Story Girl" and other books by this entertaining writer.

The book abounds with humor and furnishes many a hearty laugh. It contains the pathetic and the reader finds himself occasionally brushing aside a tear. There are elevating and comforting sentiments that give inspiration and there is sentiment in every line. It is a tale which one will delight to read.

"Ralph Somerby at Panama," by Francis Raleigh. $1.50. (The Page Co. Boston.)

The initial volume of what is known as "The Panama Series," by Francis Raleigh, is a charmingly written, beautifully illustrated and well written. This first volume of the new series gives a graphic account of the famous raid of Morgan's terrible men on Panama near the close of the Seventeenth century—a period in history which is brim full of interest and thrilling adventure.

"John O'Parlette," by Jean Edgerton. Net. $1.25. (The Page Co. Boston.)

"John O'Parlette" is the sort of book that a reader will lay aside with a sigh of regret, because it is not longer. One cannot follow the unfolding of its simple plot without feeling within him a stirring or reawakened good will toward men. He cannot but admire the honest integrity of the splendid dog, John O'Parlette; he cannot help feeling tender pity for the sufferings of little Jim, and above all, he must be before the splendid exhibition of real humane kindness even under unwarranted abuse, which is put forth by "Witch Brevish."

It is a book well calculated to appeal to the highest and best in the reader. It grips his heart, strengthens his character and sends him forth with renewed strength and belief in the worthiness of living not only for himself, but for others.

"The Spell of Switzerland," by Nathan Haskell Dole. Net. $1.50. (The Page Co. Boston.)

No series of travel books has attracted more favorable attention than "The Spell Series," published by the Pages. One reason, and the most important, of course, is that each volume is written by one who has made the country in question a deep study; its physical and political conditions, its history, its romance, and its legends. The author has been able to weave into this entertaining work all the picturesque charm for the little republic which his recent sojourn there had inspired in him. It is historical, but it is also a narrative of the present day. Switzerland, told with fine dramatic effect, is a most desirable addition to the series.

BAND MEN DO GUARD DUTY

From the Washington Herald.

With 5,000 men doing duty under Col. L. W. T. Walling, commandant of the First Brigade of United States Marine Corps, operating in eastern Mexico, the complement of men at the local barracks and navy yard consists of only 186 men. Of these 68 are members of the Marine band, 88 are apprentices, that is, music boys, and the rest are of the official force detailed from corps members. All told, the privates at the marine barracks will have not been ordered away number seven men.

In this crisis it has become necessary to detail members of the Marine band to do guard duty at the barracks, and while the musicians are not averse to filling in during the present stress of war, many humorous incidents have cropped out because of this enforced guard mounting.

It is said that when an expert hellion player of the band was ordered on duty he brought his large brass instrument, a verbal request to the sergeant in charge of the ammunition to have furnished him a sufficient amount of explosives to load his instrument. Either because the ammunition in the general store at the barracks had run low or else the hellion player was considered facetious, the keeper of gunpowder refused the request.

Another musician who plays the delicately reeded oboe, answered the clarinet player's call of "Who comes there?" with a timid run of the diaphragm, ending with a tremendous burst of notes that were at once protected because the other real performer was not to frighten the fagot-like expert of the clarinet who wished to improve his tone, and all time practices almost continually while standing in front of the southern gate, and never before have the despens of East Washington taken as much interest in the guards at the gates as at this time.

When two men of the bandmen occupy posts of guard together, duets are played and the melodic patriotism of the musician-guard finds many warm advocates in the inmates who congregate outside the gates to "hear" these men do their guard duty.

The men do two-hour duty, and are off for the four hours following: The men of the band are in alphabetical order of name. Thus the solo saxophonist has as his relief the player of the bull fiddle, the trap drummer and the trombonist and baritone player, voice their opinion of the enforced service by a fugue in lower "E."

SANATORIA AND ADJACENT PROPERTY

In 1911, Chicago was preparing to build a tuberculosis sanatorium. An option on exactly the right piece of property at a low price was obtained. The property to the south of the tract was well built up, there being a school, a hospital, and a considerable number of private homes within three blocks of the south line. The property east, north and west, having been used for truck farms for several years, was not divided into lots and few people lived on it.

The opposition of the neighbors was great, and finally the trustees were forced to relinquish their option. The enforced change of location caused the city to lose $180,000. The piece which they finally purchased was not worth as much as $180,000 as the piece relinquished.

The determining cause of the failure of negotiations was a tangle in the title, but the tangle was of little consequence, and would not have arisen had the subject not been stimulated. The underlying cause of the loss was the opposition of the neighbors.

The opposition was based upon two points. The people with tuberculosis in the sanatorium would be a menace to the people of the neighborhood, and particularly to the children in the neighborhood. It is to be borne in mind that there were 100 acres in the tract, and no buildings occupied by consumptives would be nearer the school than a quarter of a mile.

The real ground for opposition was the fear that the presence of the sanatorium would lessen the value of nearby property. The opposition had its way. The trustees bought a piece of property a mile and a half farther out.

The sanatorium is nearing completion. A street car line is being built to the site of the grounds. The first locality is still given over to truck farms, whereas the new locality is filling up with homes, and the newly opened streets are traveled.

The location of sanatoria is a live question. Many communities are called upon to take positions. Heads of families want to do what is necessary to protect their children. Owners of property want to protect their property. Officials want to act with wisdom.

This article is for the benefit of these groups. The facts for their guidance have been gathered, but the average man called upon to decide does not know where to get the facts, and he is liable to be misled, for, as Hamilton Mathews, antiquated ideas and unfounded impressions still prevail among those who have not made a study of the subject.

There have been sanatoria for consumptives in Switzerland for more than 40 years. A number of years ago the Swiss government conducted investigations which led it to say that consumption hospitals, so far from increasing consumption among the neighbors, lessened it, and so far from decreasing the value of property around about, increased it.

and Prevention of Tuberculosis for 1906. The conclusion was that the location of a consumption sanatorium in a neighborhood lessened the amount of tuberculosis among the neighbors and increased the value of property in the neighborhood.

The National Association has brought this matter down to date in a pamphlet just issued, entitled "The Effect of Tuberculosis Institutions on the Value and Desirability of Surrounding Property." This pamphlet can be had from the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, 105 East Twenty-second street, New York city, for the small sum of 10 cents.

The chapter headings are:

1. Review of former investigations.
2. Information gathered from 63 hospitals in all sections of the United States.
3. Facts obtained in a first-hand investigation of property values around five tuberculosis institutions of different types.
4. Digest of several typical facts and ordinances.
5. Opinions of eminent men, boards of health and insurance companies.
6. "Court decisions."
7. Summary and conclusions.
8. Appendix. Assessment values of properties near institutions.

We advise any community in which this is a live question to secure sufficient copies of this pamphlet to make the information contained generally available for their people.

In the case of Frazer vs. City of Chicago (188-11, 1891) the supreme court of Illinois held that a city had the right to establish a contagious disease hospital wherever the public good demanded and that the neighbors could not enjoin it nor could they recover for damage to their property. The court said:

"In the doing of an act clearly within the power of the city under its police power, where injury is the necessary result of the doing thereof, no redress can be had. Supposed damages growing out of the proper exercise of the police power must be considered damnum absque injuria, in the theory of the law, that the plaintiff is compensated for the injury sustained by sharing in the general benefits which are secured to all by reason thereof."

This opinion, held generally as the law of the question, is to the effect that a community has the right to build a sanatorium regardless of the objections of the neighbors. And the neighbors cannot recover damages. The authorities, however, never want to go that far. The builder of a sanatorium should be with the uplifted hand, because of the increased value of their property from the increased demand for property in the neighborhood.

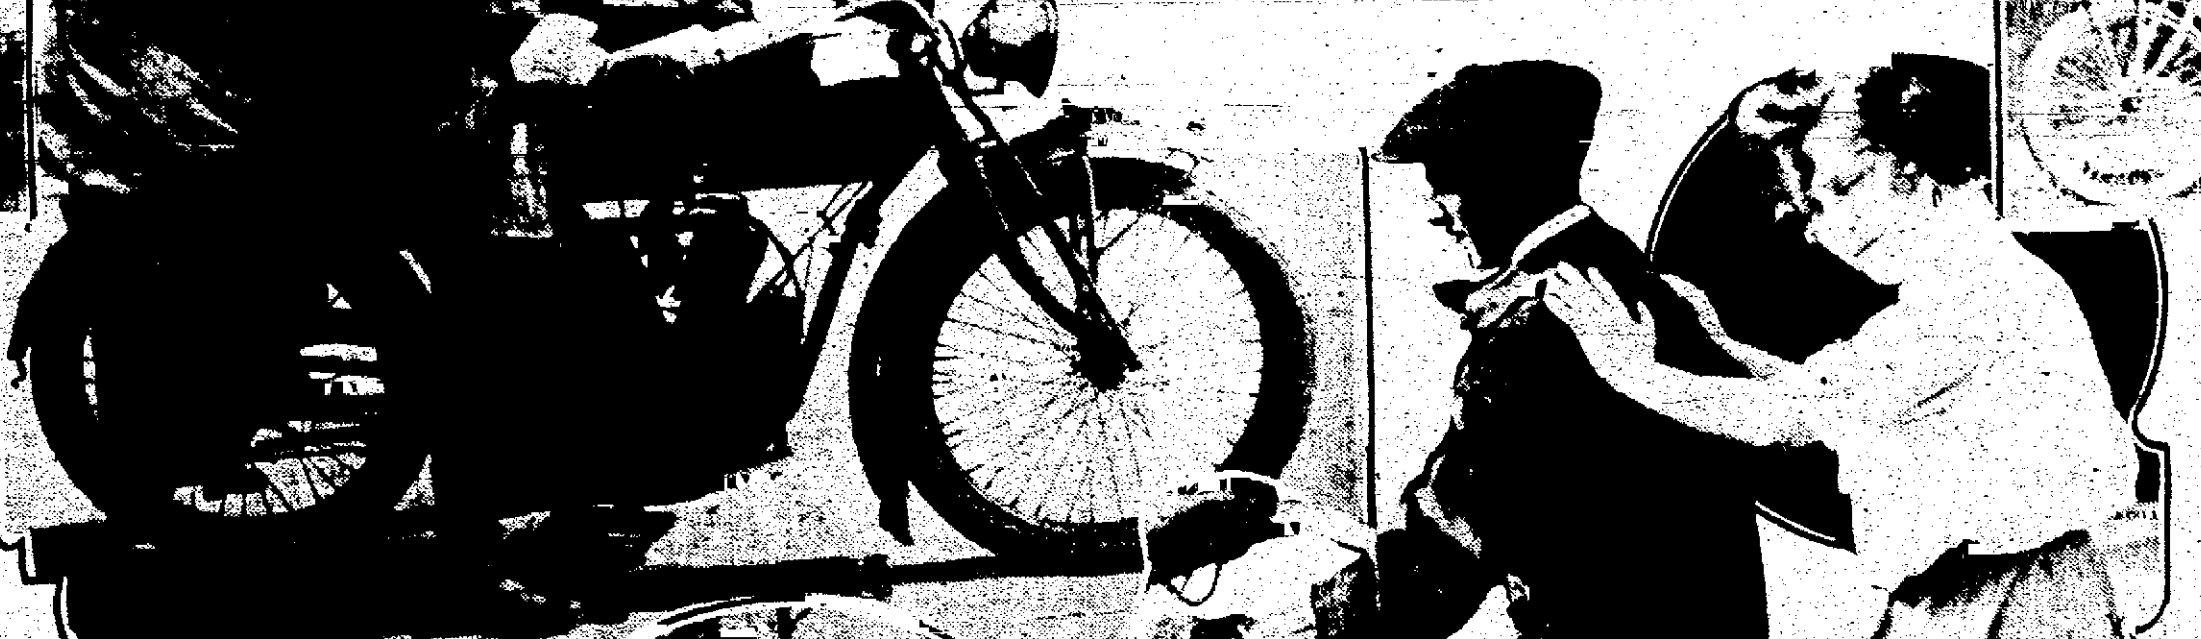

In Baldwin's article quoted by the pamphlet cited 13 per cent of the localities reported that the sanatoria had improved the value of neighboring property. In 26 per cent there had been no change. In 7 per cent there had been depreciation. In one of the last groups the property reported as depreciated was within 400 feet of the sanatorium.

Girls Who Outrace The Wind

Daring Riders on the Back Seat of a Motorcycle or in a Side Car Urge Their Drivers to Go Faster
as They Tear Along

A girl, 13 years old, was witness to a police court in Omaha, Neb., the other day when a man was brought before the Judge on a charge of speeding.

"How fast was this couple?" asked the Police Judge of the motorcycle patrolman who had made the arrest.

"Judge, I don't know," said the patrolman. "My machine was going eighty-five miles an hour and couldn't catch up. They didn't know the lay of the ground as I did, however, and ran into a street used for repairs and I caught them as they were lifting their motorcycle over a ditch to clear the obstructions. The red light on the street work saved me. As it was, they were not going to stop until they had turned one side and crashed through a fence, but I ran over several lawns when they were finally turned over in a ditch."

The girl later took the witness stand and admitted she and her mother were going pretty fast. She said they were in no danger, however.

"Ben never drives recklessly," said the Judge. "He was going because the night was warm and he wanted to cool off."

" weren't you scared?" asked the Judge in astonishment. "Aren't you afraid to speed like that?"

"I was at first," said the girl. "I got used to it, though. I first had an automobile speeding. But a while later, as fast in an automobile as on a motorcycle. I persuaded Ben to get rid of the automobile and buy the motorcycle so we could get around faster."

The Judge lectured the couple, but made some remarks about a new type of disease attacking the city of the cities. He assessed a fine on Ben and the case was dismissed. Ben promised not to speed any more in the city limits.

As first the disease struck New York. It came to Chicago and St. Louis. Next it appeared in San Francisco, where girls climbed on the back seats of tandem motorcycles to ride to the top of Mount Hamilton with their escorts. The motorcycle is a good mountain climber and that made it popular in the hill country. It is cheaper than the automobile as well as faster and that made it popular with the poorer men.

First the motorcycle craze seized the men. It took first the men of moderate means, who lived far from their work, and wanted a cheap method of getting to work in a hurry. The motorcycle answered the purpose because it is ready all the time and can travel over roads the heavier automobile cannot traverse. Then they put on the tandem seat. It was only a short time from the tandem seat of the motorcycle to the tandem seat of the automobile. The tandem seat on bicycles had been used a long time before the invention of the motorcycle.

Then there were women whose husbands could not afford an automobile and who could afford motorcycles. They wanted to ride with their husbands and demanded the side car. The side car on the motorcycle is more comfortable. The convenience of the thing appealed to them, too. The motorcycle did not need much shelter and can be taken care of much more easily than an automobile. Of course for a man who wants to take his family out riding or who wants a substitute car with a cushion back seat and the best springs ever made in history, he had better buy an automobile, but for the young man whose best girl wants to ride a mile a minute or faster and get away from the policeman at the same time, the motorcycle is the convenience he wants.

The last generation has seen a remarkable change in the styles of women, both in dress and in the manner in which they ride.

SAIDLES FORMERLY ONLY CONNECT-ABLE

When women first began to ride, some thousands of years ago, it was perfectly proper for them to race up alongside a horse, seize it by the mane, vault to the horse's back and ride away, sitting astride. Those women have nearly all gone. Now and then one hears of them in the Far West or in Argentine Republic.

Then came the age of dignified women. Men ordered their wives to stay at home and do the cooking, and if they rode at all they had to ride on a side saddle with one knee hooked over the saddle pommel. Once in a while special dispensation was given to military women like Joan of Arc, but a divided skirt for women of peaceful bent did not meet with general approval until recent years when New Mexico took the lead and allowed women to ride as men. The fashion spread eastward until today they even ride astride once in a while in old Boston town.

Next came the bicycle. Women on bicycles did not ride with divided skirts. The bar from the seat to the handle bars on the woman's bicycle curved downward, giving the women all the opportunity she wished to sit on the machine easily.

But the motorcycle is not constructed along those lines. With a powerful engine pumping it along faster than the wind, the motorcycle needs a strong frame, and the bowed frame is not strong.

Once more women hark back to the days of old and although her conventional dress does not permit her to ride astride as it did in the days of the Amazons, yet she rides astride again, using a divided skirt. With a skirt of khaki she can be seen any night in the year flitting with death along the city's streets. With her lungs full of fresh air which cuts her face like a knife, as she goes speeding faster than anyone ever sped before, she enjoys life to the full extent.

Let the night be ever so hot she is always cool or cold. The motorcycle girl ties her head up in a knot to keep her hair from flying all around and constantly urges her driver to go faster. June 1. Bankers and investors who may have entertained doubts may find reassurance about the conditions of the industry in a comparison of exports made by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce from the current summary of commerce and finance issued by the United States Department of Commerce.

Most of the increases in exports have been in raw and partly manufactured materials. Only a few of the many articles exported ready for consumption show an increase.

Among these are automobiles, motorcycles, aeroplanes, cash registers and adding machines, electric locomotives, stationary and marine steam engines, printing presses and typesetting machinery, gasoline and illuminating and fuel oils, motion picture films, malt and spirituous liquors, cigarettes, toilet preparations and manufactures of wool.

Even the army makes of automobiles a competitor in the things which move on wheels without a horse to pull them. Instead of the crack of the blacksnake, and the violent but picturesque language of the mule driver, comes only the honk of the auto horn.

When the Mexican situation made it necessary for Uncle Sam to send men and war supplies to the border, motor trucks were the means employed.

Out of Los Angeles, headed southward, was soon observed a section White motor truck, loaded to its capacity, and traveling under orders to make the trip in the best possible time.

This truck was detailed for duty between San Diego and Tachate. The trip from Los Angeles to San Diego was anything but a pleasure drive, through the deep sand of the low places and across the stretches of rocky coast where the roads were little more than rough trails hewed out of the rocky surface.

Even in the deep sand, the dual tires of the rear held the wheels well to the surface. When gravelly stretches were crossed, where the rolling wheels prevented a firm grip of the trail, the resilient rubber found a grip somehow.

In spite of all handicaps, the trip from Los Angeles to San Diego, a stretch of 118 miles, was made in thirteen hours. Some difference between this and the tedious, drawn-out, overland trips in the days of the army mule.

The motorcycle has an advantage over the automobile in that it does not take up so much room on the street. The problem of the automobile is becoming a serious one in the cities. Detroit has established a new regulation, directing the automobile out of certain districts of the city because they took up all the available curb space. Other cities have had to adopt measures requiring automobiles to park in certain sections of the city and along specified streets.

For all classes of the automobile and related machines, the motorcycle has proven of incalculable value in the army.

SCOUTS USE MACHINES IN PLACE OF HORSE.

Scouts in Mexico have used it in place of the horse. The use of the engine are limited so as not to be heard at a great distance.

For chasing automobile speeders there is nothing better than a motorcycle. The motorcycle patrolmen are fearless men and will go at any rate of speed. There is no part of any city in the country where the motorcycle cannot reach in less than an hour from the nearest police station in good weather. Most places can be reached in five minutes. It puts a premium on honesty.

INTERNATIONAL SHIPPERS PLAN TO ESTABLISH STANDARD BARREL FOR MEASUREMENT EVERYWHERE

When is a barrel not a barrel? It will interest the average person who is not familiar with the inconsistencies of the laws passed by Congress to know that the answer to this puzzling question is that a barrel may not be a barrel measure when it contains any other dry commodity than apples. Although the apple barrel is a measure fixed by law, there is a defect in the law because the adoption of the standard is not made compulsory, and a person cannot always be sure he is getting an honest barrel even when he is buying apples.

Nearly two years ago Congress passed an act to establish a standard barrel for apples. The same law established standard grades for apples when packed in barrels. The legislation went into effect July 1, 1913, and although the use of the standard apple barrel was not made compulsory, the establishment of the standard was strongly endorsed by the International Apple Shippers' Association, and the size fixed by Congress has been generally adopted during the past year.

The standard apple barrel contains 105 dry quarts, which is the size of the flour barrel most commonly in use. At the present time, however, many commodities are sold in barrels of much less than 105 quarts, sometimes even less than 100. The cranberry barrel is only eighty-three quarts measure. To the average person a shortage of only five quarts in a barrel of any ordinary commodity, sold in bulk, may not seem to be large enough an item of loss to cause much worry.

Five quarts of apples or potatoes, for instance, would not be missed by the purchaser of a single barrel of these products. It is in the wholesale business, however, that the shortage makes itself felt, and weight and measure experts point out that when it is remembered that a shortage of five quarts in twenty-one barrels makes a loss of one whole barrel, the reasons for adopting a standard barrel may then be readily understood.

Why Congress enacted a law establishing a standard sized barrel in which to pack apples and did not standardize the barrel measure for all other dry commodities is more than any one has attempted to answer. The principal reason, perhaps, is that both the apple shippers and the purchasing public wanted a standard sized apple barrel. Congress was given the authority to fix the standard of weights and measures in the same section of the Constitution of the United States which provides for the coinage of money, yet the first law fixing a standard measure for commercial products to be placed on American statute books was the apple barrel law enacted two years ago.

A law which establishes a standard barrel for all dry commodities is now pending in the House of Representatives, after having passed the Senate. The bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator John W. Weeks of Massachusetts, and in the House by Representative William E. Tuttle of New Jersey. It fixes a compulsory standard barrel measure for all dry commodities and prescribes a penalty for the use of any other barrel. It is generally admitted that there is no doubt about the constitutionality of the pending law, because ample authority is given Congress in the section of the Constitution providing for the fixing of standards of weights and measures.

The need for a standard sized barrel is urged by weights and measures experts in all parts of the country and by commission merchants and purchasers of food products and other dry commodities which are shipped in barrels. At the present time, a number of States have barrel measure laws. These laws are not uniform, and in some cases a short barrel of 100 quarts or less has been adopted. Virginia, for instance, has adopted a short barrel standard, and when her products are shipped to New York or to other markets the purchaser is always bewildered in trying to find out whether he is buying full or short measure. Speaking of the needs of a standard barrel law, L. A. Fischer, chief of the division of weights and measures of the United States Bureau of Standards, says:

"To protect the consumers of all dry measure products there is an urgent need for a standard barrel which will make it a misdeed to sell any dry commodity in a barrel unless it is of the standard and prescribed by Congress for a standard apple barrel, with content of 105 dry quarts, the same size as the ordinary flour barrel.

There is no reason why shippers of various products should be permitted by the purchasing public to use containers of different dimensions and to call one of these containers a barrel. To permit any sized container to be sold as a barrel, even when the capacity is marked on the outside, is just as logical as to permit any sized measure to be called a bushel, providing the capacity is marked, or to allow any quantity of coal to be called a ton, providing the number of pounds is given. Any law which virtually legalizes short measure would result in confusion rather than protection to those purchasing by the barrel.

About Tenements.

The Tenement House Commissioner John J. Murphy is sending in to the congested districts of the East and West sides copies of a pamphlet entitled "For You." The book contains in readable and concise form facts that folk living in city tenements need to know for their safety and health.

"For You" is the result of Mayor Mitchell's policy of educating the city departments. The pamphlet is intended to make New York tenements better and healthier abodes. At present it is printed only in English, but translations into German, Yiddish and Italian will be made soon. More than 1,000,000 will come from the press, and one will be placed in the hands of every adult tenement house dweller.

At the bottom of the cover is a legend setting forth that it is difficult to earn money, but more difficult to spend it right. Furthermore, health is wealth. The tenement dweller is told briefly and plainly how to increase his stock of health, thereby increasing his earning capacity, and how to reduce his doctor's bills, thereby making greater savings possible.

It being supposed he desires health he is told ways of preserving it. The word "hygiene" doesn't appear, nor does any word a child of 10 could not understand.

The pamphlet says windows are intended to admit light and air and the dweller is instructed to keep them open summer and winter. He is told what methods to use, and the promise is made that if the instructions are obeyed the family will be free from colds next winter.

Flies come in for a special chapter. How a fly carries typhoid germs is not only told, but pictured out. The dweller is impressed with the necessity of keeping the fly away from the food supply and is told to swat him.

UPON entering the main gates of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition from San Francisco the visitor will find he must traverse a vast stretch of landscaped grounds, wherein are set millions of beautiful flowers in bloom, where fountains play and groups of statuary are set at intervals. The photograph herewith shows the great South Gardens as they are today and gives a glimpse of the fairyland which will delight Exposition visitors. In the rear center of the photograph is seen the vast dome of the Palace of Horticulture, 188 feet in height and 152 feet in diameter. To the right is seen the framing for two great Italian towers which will mark either side of the entrance to the Court of the Four Seasons. These towers will be 200 feet in height.

sanatorium, in another, within 1,500 feet, and in two other cases the reports said the presence of the sanatorium had prevented the sale of property. In 1909 Jacobs sent a list of questions to 37 institutions in 22 states. The questions went to superintendents, real estate dealers, and others. The answers showed that 75.5 of the institutions had improved the value of nearby property. In only one instance had the sanatorium decreased the value of property.

To the questions sent out by the association in 1913, replies came from 84 localities. In 54 the property had increased in value as a result of the sanatoria. In 14 values had not been changed. In six cases the answers were too indefinite for classification.

Dr. Garvin of Raybrook reports that the value of land around there was about $4 before the sanatorium started. It now ranges from $50 to $150 an acre.

Dr. Lyman of Wallingford, Conn., reported: "All land has more than doubled in value."

Dr. English of Glen Gardner, N. J., "Increased at least 50 per cent."

Dr. Nichols of Hebron, Me., "Increase of about 20 per cent of valuation and tax."

Dr. Butts of Eagleville, Pa., "Increase 25 to 50 per cent."

Dr. Pettit of Ottawa, Ill., "Increase

33 1/3 per cent."

Dr. Sauer of Hospital and House of Rest, New York city, "Increase at least 50 per cent."

Dr. Barnes of Wallum Lake, R. I.,

"Land at least double what it was before, sanatorium was erected."

Dr. Chadwick of Westfield, Mass.,

"Twenty-five per cent to 30 per cent increase."

Dr. Pottinger of Monrovia, Cal., "It has increased."

Those institutions in the main have been located in the country on property of little value, in regions seldom visited. There are some exceptions,

but this is true in the main.

The effect of the sanatorium is much the same as that from locating any other large plant in such a neighborhood. More people travel to and from the town; more use is made of the streets and roads; more houses are built to house the increased population, and more stores, hotels and living stables are maintained, to serve them.

The more intensive studies of the association were, therefore, made in the main in larger cities where already

there were traffic, crowded streets,

houses and stores.

Seton hospital is in upper New York city. A piece of property adjoining

Seton was assessed at $220 in 1900 and $7,000 in 1913. The tax assessor for the district counts the hospital as an asset to the property of the vicinity.

The neighborhood is slowly filling up with high-grade residences.

Sprain Ridge hospital is located in a sparsely settled portion of Yorkers,

N. Y. The property increased in as-essed value 51 per cent between 1907

and 1914. Property in the immediate vicinity, but not adjoining, increased

51 per cent in the same period. There is more building activity in the neighborhood than is general in Yorkers.

The Bowne Memorial hospital is located one-half a mile from Poughkeepsie,

N. Y. Assessed values of property have gone up about 10 per cent

since 1908.

The Montrose home is located near Bedford station, 30 miles from New York city. The increase in value of the adjoining real estate is about the same as that of other real estate in the same type of country.

Gaylord, Conn. Wallingford, Conn., is a few miles out of New Haven. The increase in the value of adjoining property is about normal. The owners of adjoining property do not feel that the sanatorium has injured their property.

In addition to the increase in the value of property there has been shown a consensus of opinion that the presence of a sanatorium has induced improvements in the adjacent property.

Dr. Butts of Eagleville, Pa., reports:

"New homes have sprung up from time to time and at present quite a large building operation within four squares of the sanatorium is nearing completion."

Boston is said to have had the first telephone exchange in the world.

"Go-to-Church" Plan Proves Effective Even in China

For the First Time in Their Lives Many Students in Peking Attend Christian Services—Social Service Methods in Orient—Princeton Extension in China's Capital Effective Among Government Students—U. of P. Changes in China

BY THE RELIGIOUS RAMBLER

The chief of staff at the Princeton work in Peking, Robert Reed Taylor, is now in this country on furlough, renewing acquaintance with the circle which a generation ago knew him as "Bob" Gailey, Princeton's famous football center. He brings interesting news from China, which has long been a center for the work in Peking. The young men's work in Peking, conducted by the Princeton alumni and undergraduate body.

Most interesting is the news of how a "Go-to-Church" Sunday was kept in Peking, showing that nowadays so closely interwoven is world thought, that a good plan adopted elsewhere is soon practiced everywhere.

Getting Heavens Students to Church. "Go-to-Church" Sunday in a Christian land is one thing; but in the capital of Peking, China it is quite another, and the most significant fact in the report from the recent "Go-to-Church" Sunday, engineered by the Princeton workers in Peking, is the statement that between 150 and 200 young men of the student classes on that day, for the first time in their lives, crossed the threshold of a Christian church.

The plan was designed for the student classes and centered about the Bible class, comprising most all government students, which the Princeton workers conduct in the U. of P. A. All the Christian ministers of the city were invited to prepare special sermons for students on the day designated as "Go-to-Church" Sunday. The leading laymen and ministers of the Christian churches met in the preceding week to discuss the best presentation of the theme to non-Christian young men. The students met in the

T. M. C. A. lobby, and each was decorated by a large yellow badge, and they were led in detachments to the churches of their choice, if they had any choice.

The experiment was a big success, especially from the impression made upon the children themselves, who are mostly from the humbler walks of life, and who were highly delighted to have these members of the official class honor their humble churches. The effect upon the students themselves was so immediate, that a dozen from the Naval college made application to join the church on probation at once, but were astonished when they were informed they would have to spend a period in studying the Bible before being accepted.

Teaching Religion to Students.

Increasingly the mission work in Peking, which is the Princeton enterprise, finds its attention directed toward the students in the government colleges. Three-quarters of the 731 students at present enrolled in Bible classes come from the student classes. Boys under 16 years of age kept coming into the meetings, to such an extent that 10 special classes were formed for them.

Students and Social Service.

A hitch has arisen in the Princeton plan for a city-wide work by the Student Social Service club in Peking. The Government is so suspicious of all organizations of students that it has forbidden the use of this name and has refused permission for the conducting of schools, the delivering of lectures and other work of a social character.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and itching hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Now, however, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application of two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy. ## SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

WE FAT TOO MUCH MEAT WHICH CLOGS KIDNEYS THEN THE BACK ACHES

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally. else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region; severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness, and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean; and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the juice of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to weak clogged kidneys and stimulates them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delicious effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications. A well-known local druggist says he sells lot of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble. Adv.

has been equipped in a congested part of the city, and students from this club maintain it. Boys have been taught basketball, volleyball, calisthenic drills and out-door games. They especially appreciate "shoot the chutes," which lands each boy in a sandpit. The spirit of service is so strong among the awakened Chinese youth that as an outgrowth of the Religious Discussion club, which has for four months been meeting every Sunday evening to talk over in English the subject of comparative religions, 12 volunteers to back up teachers of classes of government students during the campaign which Mr. George Sherwood Eddy is to conduct in Peking this fall. Since the meetings conducted in the spring of last year by Mr. John R. Mott and Mr. Eddy among students of Peking, 136 have joined Peking churches.

A U. of P. Change in China.

Service has been spelled large in the program of the University of Pennsylvania's work in China. The complete responsibility for a medical school at Canton, in connection with the Canton

Christian college, has been abandoned by the University of Pennsylvania, and, instead, Dr. Joseph McCracken, "Doc" McCracken of football fame—has been transferred to Shanghai, where he has taken up work in connection with St. John's college, the leading educational institution of the Episcopal church in China.

Dr. William W. Cadbury of the well-known Quaker family of that name, remains in Canton and has the support of the University of Pennsylvania's undergraduates and alumni, as well as Dr. Howard Woods. In addition to serving on the staff of the Canton Christian college, they have taken charge of the historic Peter Parker Memorial hospital in Canton—where there are almost 200 in-patients now—and will conduct it as their work.

Like the other American college workers in China, these men are bending their best efforts to making leaders for the new era in China; for what the nation needs are less new laws and new methods than qualified men who can direct the destinies of the republic in the grave times that are still ahead of the oldest nation.

Last week in society, while not holding any large or brilliant functions, was nevertheless a rather happy one. Aside from Major Henry Leonard and Mrs. E. W. Leonard's wedding which took place Monday morning, there has been little of unusual interest. The days were full of motor parties, quiet little bridge teas and many family luncheons where special visiting guests were entertained. The porches of the Cheyenne Mountain club were gay with small afternoon affairs, where tea and other refreshments were served by those who sought the coolness of the country.

MRS. JAMES J. BROWN

Of Denver who it is said, now wants to be a United States senator in 1916. "I want to be a senator," Mrs. Brown says, "because I have done about everything else." State Senator Helen Rhin Robinson of Colorado believes that conditions are now ripe for Mrs. Brown to start her campaign for the nomination to succeed Charles S. Thomas, whose term expires next year.

available material has been gathered the piles are then carried to their village, where they undergo a process of fermentation, or smoking, for about three days, and the leaves are then broken up into powder and are ready for the market.

Paraguay tea resembles our tea and coffee in that the chemical analysis of the leaves shows that they contain, in addition to the essential oils, chlorophyll, resin, and other vegetable ingredients. Both tea and coffee are used in green or black tea, or in coffee of coffee or marsh, as it is sometimes termed, the product contains less than does tea, but about the same proportion that is to be found in coffee. In recent years considerable quantities are being exported to Great Britain, Germany, and other European countries, and experiments are being made with the view of using it in the army supplies of those countries. Once introduced into this country, and given a fair trial, it will doubtless become a popular beverage and soon be on tap at our soda fountains.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

ERBA MATE, THE TEA OF SOUTH AMERICA

"Toma usted mate?" (Will you take some tea?) is the customary welcome from the mate, or gourd, in which it is served to the weary traveler in the rural districts of Paraguay; and if the traveler is something of a diplomatist he will. And that, too, even if the host does take the first sip from the bombilla, through which it is sucked, before he passes it to the guest.

KAISER CONFERS NEW TITLE ON SON'S BRIDE-TO-BE. COUNTESS INA MARIE VON BASSEWITZ-LEWETZOW AND PRINCE OSCAR OF GERMANY. Although he bitterly opposed the marriage of his fifth son, Prince Oscar, to the Countess, Ina von Bassewitz-Levetzow, a woman of lower rank than the prince, Kaiser Wilhelm has conferred the title of Countess of Ruppin on his son's bride-to-be. This will be known as a marriage of convenience because the countess is not of royal blood.

NEW BARBER SHOPS IN INDIA

Many Europeans Employ Natives, Who Come to Their Residences

From the New York Telegram

There are few barber shops in India, according to a report made by Henry D. Baker, United States consul. He says:

"There are probably not more than 30 barber shops in India of sufficiently high class to make use of imported barber appliances. Such shops have practically only the European element to cater to, and many of the Europeans employ native barbers who have no shops but come to their private residences with razors, scissors, etc., to perform any services required."

"The best equipped barber shops are in Calcutta, where there is the largest European population; a few other cities, such as Bombay, Lucknow, Lahore and important hill stations, such as Simla, the summer capital of India, Darjeeling and Mussoorie, also have them in less number."

"At the hill stations the European population, including civil and military officials and transient tourists, is in the summer time relatively larger than in other towns of India."

SASLAVSKY TRIO WILL BE HEARD IN COLORADO SPRINGS NEXT WEEK

NOTED ORGANIZATION WILL GIVE CONCERT AT BROADMOOR

Burns Players, With Thurston Hall, to Present "Prince Karl" This Week

During the winter music season Colorado Springs music lovers have the opportunity of hearing singers and instrumentalists of the first rank, but rarely at any season a chamber-music organization of any kind.

The Florence String quartet, which played here last spring, demonstrated that at its best a quartet of the sort it gave appeals not only to the trained musician but to all who have any interest in music. Encouraged by the very hearty appreciation accorded the Florence, Theodore Fisher, who presented them here, has secured for a summer recital another and similar group of players.

The Saslavsky trio, consisting of Alexander Saslavsky, violinist, Alfred De Vore, pianist, and Herbert Riley, cellist, is the combination of able players that will be heard on the afternoon of Wednesday, August 12, at the Broadmoor casino. Much of interest might be written of these men, for each has established himself as a master of his chosen instrument.

Saslavsky is the first violinist, concertmaster and assistant conductor under Walter Damrosch of the New York Symphony orchestra. He is generally recognized by critics as one of the foremost violinists of the day. De Vore, whose home is in Boston, has for some years played at intervals as soloist with the Boston Symphony orchestra, and with the Longy Club Woodwind ensemble of that city. Riley is known to San Francisco and the Pacific coast as the finest cellist in that section, and is generally ranked as among the ablest of America's younger musicians.

The Saslavsky trio is available for a concert here only because its members happen to be spending the summer months in the Colorado Rockies. They have given one concert in Denver during the summer season and are engaged for three more.

The recital here will be of unusual interest because the trio will play the composition of Frederic Ayres of this city, a composition which critics rank as among the greatest work of American composers. The trio has never been played publicly in this city, though it was given at a private recital at the home of Mrs. W. K. Jewett several years ago. Since then a public hearing of the composition has been afforded in Chicago and Cincinnati, and several of the finest chamber-music organizations in the country have arranged to feature it next season.

"Prince Karl," described as a "romantic comedy," is to be the play this week at the Burns theater. By no means a recent production, the drama is none the less an entertaining one with a generous sprinkling of comedy. For the romantically inclined the situation of an impetuous but noble German prince in love with a beautiful and wealthy young American widow, a scheming Chicago lawyer of the Albee Hummel type, an avaricious and hypocritical mother-in-law, much epigrammatic comedy and many laughable situations should form a most pleasant diversion. Archibald Claver, Irving Ginter is the author of "Prince Karl," and is well known as the author of a number of novels and plays in which interesting characterization and heart interest combined with plenty of action dominate. Such is "Prince Karl."

The last of his line and overwhelmed with debt, Prince Karl is about to marry Mrs. Daphne Lowell, whom he thinks is a wealthy, if elderly, American woman, but who is in reality only the guardian of a charming and wealthy daughter-in-law, Mrs. Florence Arnold-Lowell, whom the prince soon discovers to be a wonderfully beautiful American girl who won his heart some time before. To be near her and to escape the wiles of the mother-in-law, the prince, at first feigns insanity, and then takes on the disguise of a courier. It then develops that Karl, and not the girl he loves, is the rightful possessor of the fortune left by the Chicago real estate broker who bears Karl's name. But this matters little when Prince Karl and his attractive sweetheart find that they love each other and despite the plotting of interested schemers, can make a life together.

Thurston Hall, new leading man at the Burns, could not be seen in a more fitting part than that of the German Prince Karl, a tall, striking, handsome, and with the splendid proportion that the theatre alone attains. At the Alcazar theater in San Francisco, where he just closed a most successful engagement as leading man for Lillian Russell in "Wildfire," and as leading man in several of the best stock companies of America, Mr. Hall is accredited as one of the most finished and certainly one of the most admired leading men in stock. Next week Channing Pollock's play, "The Little Gray Wolf," is to be produced by the Burns Players.

New York lost Dorothy Bentley and Carlos Sebastian, the two principal dancers at the Jardin de Danse. They have gone to Atlantic City on a belated honeymoon. It may be recalled that this interesting pair of dancers were secretly married and concealed the fact for more than two months. When it was finally discovered they were compelled to leave New York behind them on account of the congratulations of their friends, who left them no time to escape in their profession.

"Strange," ruminates Dorothy Bentley, the terpsichorean sprite, speaking of the frequent marriages of millionaires to stage divinites, "strange, but the richer the man the poorer the husband."

NEW YORK MANAGERS MAKE ALMOST CLEAN SWEEP IN ENGLAND

Tyler, Shubert, Frohman and Brady Bringing All but Two Stars to U. S.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—William A. Brady, the producer, before sailing for New York, expressed wonder as to how the English theaters would be able to open this fall owing to the extraordinary number of English actors and actresses who have been engaged for America. Mr. Brady said:

"The engagements that have been made by Mr. Tyler, Mr. Shubert, Mr. Frohman and myself will practically depopulate the English stage, and it seems to me that the English managers will have a devil of a time in making up their casts. While the 'movies' have played havoc in the United States, there is no doubt an increasing desire on the part of English actors to go to America and this will play havoc with the English theaters."

The English actor, who formerly used to get $50 ($50) a week in England is lured with a desire to conquer America and turning up his nose at the English managers says: "My lowest price is $40 ($200) a week." Curiously enough, the English actor is not so extravagant in his salary demands for an American season as he used to be. He has got back in his mind the phenomenal success of Forbes-Robertson, who came back from the United States independently wealthy and now has enough money to afford a knight-hood.

There is Cyril Maude also. His success in "Trampy" in New York and in London after he returned here probably will lead to his being knighted. This is all thanks to money from the United States. Now every English actor wants to duplicate their success and is willing to go cheap as long as he gets the opportunity. These actors believe that once they make good in the United States their salaries will automatically advance and their fortunes are made.

Thanks to George Tyler, New York will see that marvelous young actress, Phyllis Neilson-Terry, while we have engaged the equally beautiful, young and talented Marie Lohr. Terry, a capable young actress, Alexandra Cartledge, and she will probably return to the United States. Sir Herbert Beerbaum Tree is anxious to go to the United States and take Mrs. Pat Campbell with him to appear in G. B. Shaw's "Pygmalion."

Olga Nethercole, of course, is going to the United States via Canada. We will get F. R. Benson, the actor-manager, Miss Hartman's company, Cyril Maude and Forbes-Robertson again. The only actor left here seems to be Robert Lorraine, and he is only staying because he wants to fulfill his ambition to play "Cyrano de Bergerac." If I am only fortunate enough to get a suitable vehicle, this is the psychological moment to have Grace George play in England while England's charming actresses are on their way to play in the United States.

New York Theaters

By EMORY B. CALVERT.

NEW YORK, August 1.—Although Terry is a name as well known in the American theatrical world as it is in England, we of the United States know but little of the latest member of the famous family whose coming has been announced by Liebler and company.

She is Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry, daughter of the actor-manager of a generation ago, Ellen Terry, long associated with the late Sir Henry Irving, is an aunt.

For generations, even before the time of Queen Victoria, the Terry family has been the standard bearer of Shakespeare and other classical writers on the English stage.

The founder of the present family was Benjamin Terry, one of those old provincial actors who traveled about the little villages of England playing the standard pieces of the day, some of them good, most of them hopelessly bad, at least from a dramatic standpoint. Occasionally a Shakespearean performance was given, with many cuts and changes. In fact, it was more Terry than Shakespeare.

He married Sarah Terrot, and together they played all through the English provinces. They had several children: Charles Terry, well known as a manager and rather indifferently as an actor; George Terry, who became one of the successful managers of his day; and Fred Terry, the father of Phyllis.

The four daughters were, Kate, Marion, Florence, and Ellen. All of them were more or less successful in Shakespearean productions.

Fred Terry did not make his first stage appearance until he had reached the age of 27. His first visit to the United States was made in 1854, when he appeared with Miss Fortescue on her American tour. In 1855 he toured this country with Sir John Hare, and in 1860 he joined Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry, his sister, and played at the old Lyceum theater in New York. His wife, Julia Nielson, was also a member of the company.

His last appearance in New York was at the Knickerbocker theater in 1904, when he played in "The Scarlet Pimpernel" and "Henry of Navarre." With this exception, his recent years have been devoted to the London stage.

Coming thus from a family which boasts of many famous actors and actresses, Phyllis Neilson-Terry brings with her a long line of theatrical blood. She appeared in her father's companies at the early age of 7, and has known little else but theatrical life. She has already made a name for herself in London, and it is expected that she will add more laurels to her crown in America. George Tyler of the Liebler company said that he had been trying to secure her services for five years. She is now 21, her youth having been the bar to previous American engagements. Her father and mother have heretofore refused to allow their daughter to appear in this country, but now that she is of age she has made her own contract. This, in itself, is a characteristic of the Terry family. Independence and a supreme confidence in their own ability has characterized the members of the family for generations.

Just what plays she will present here have not been announced, but it is certain that Shakespeare will make up a large part of the repertoire.

"Kitty Mackay" has not reached the end of her remarkable run at the Comedy, and the management, usually considered heartless, has decided to give the hard-worked actress a rest. Hence a new company is now presenting this delightful Scotch comedy. Molly McIntyre, who created the role here, has been put back in the past, and plays the ingenious Kitty just as sweetly as she did before. The company which has been presenting the play will go on the road after a short vacation.

The Britishers may come over here and knock the spots off us playing polo, but when it comes to making up the British theater, the palm of victory must go to the Americans. A well-known actor, whose name I shall not mention, because he is a good friend of mine and, besides, his name doesn't figure here anyway, has just returned from a vacation abroad. He spent two weeks in London on his way back and renewed acquaintances with Americans playing in London theaters.

"The London Hippodrome," he said, "is certainly a chunk of dear old Broadway transplanted to England. Here were Frank Tinney, who has captured the Englishmen by storm; Ethel Levy; Shirley Kellner; and Jack Norworth, not to mention Elsie Janie, whose first London engagement has been so successful that she has had a hard time to break away."

"And," he continued, "they are all drawing good salaries. Believe me, it took the American actor to boost the salaries in England. You could engage a whole company of English artists for what Miss Janie alone costs the Hippodrome."

By the way, I understand that Frank Tinney is returning to the United States this fall, and Elsie Janie will also return to the Dillingham management after a short vacation at Danville. Elsie will probably give us some corking imitations of the London stars when we next see her.

And Now It Has Hit the Movies--Temper

May Irwin is the first to show movie temperament. Among the "legits" the word "temperament" is an old bog but among the photoplay folks one doesn't hear anything about the idea. May Irwin however sprung it in such a way that it has caused talk, says Variety.

When the Famous Players cast Miss Irwin for the "Mrs. Black Is Back" picture, Carolyn Shannon (Spike) was engaged to play opposite her. Miss Shannon has been in many films, but Miss Irwin objected to her taking part in the Irwin picture, saying Miss Shannon's movie experience and grotesque makeups were too much. Miss Irwin said she did not wish to make any of her pictures have too much of a "slapsticky" atmosphere.

Bunny Leaves Film World to Head Show

John Bunny, principal comedian with the Vitagraph for several years past, will not do any picture work next year as he arranged to appear at the head of a big specialty show. "Bunny" will be surrounded by a company composed mostly of juvenile performers. The plans for the Bunny tour are not complete but George Sidney and Louis Wiswell who have them in charge expect to make some definite announcements shortly.

Laskey Film Company After Frances Starr

David Belasco has taken under consideration a tempting offer which he has just received from the Jesse L. Laskey Film company, to allow the brilliant little Belasco actress, Frances Starr, to play her original role, that of the naive Juanita in "The Rose of the Rancho," which is the first of the Belasco successes to be enacted before the camera. The scenario of this drama of Spanish California has already been submitted to Mr. Belasco and has received his O. K., and it is planned, if Mr. Belasco will let Miss Starr play her original role, to start on the filming in the next few weeks before she resumes her tour in "The Secret."

Plays and Players

By DIXIE HINES.
"The aim of every actress," Marguerite Skirvin declares, "should be amiability."

"The actor who puts his shoulder to it is pretty apt to turn the wheel of fortune," Dorothy Bentley says.

"Many an actor has been blind to his own interest because he was dazzled by his bright prospects," is an aphorism propounded by Frank Keenan.

"Many a failure has resulted from taking care of the pennies while the dollars took care of some one else," sagely observes Gilbert White.

"Don't be discouraged because you cannot play all parts," advises Francis Powell. "The needle has but one good point, but that meets all requirements."

"The failures on the stage may be represented by those who act without thinking, and those who think about acting," sagely comments Robert Kegerreis, an interesting character actor.

"There is one thing to be said for success on the stage," Jack Laiff, the dramatist editor, recounter and a few other things observes, "it develops a number of friends in need," which, we are told are friends indeed.

Bertha Mann, now in Canada, returns to New York for rehearsals in "Today" early in September. She plays Lily Wagner in this strong drama and will have as her chief associate Arthur Byron, late leading man in "Lady Windermere's Fan" at the Liberty theater, New York.

Louise Randolph returns from her summer vacation next week. The press report that she has signed to appear as leading woman with the Famous Players Film company for a group of special pictures proves to be erroneous. She returns to the dramatic field where she has won her greatest success.

Margaret Nyblom, the irascible Max Duncanson in the Scotch comedy "Kitty MacKay," has returned to the Comedy theater after a short absence in Atlantic City. This play promises to remain at this theater until late in the season, and will probably be seen elsewhere until it opens in Chicago.

What the Press Agents Say

"MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY"

At the Empress Monday the seventh episode of this astounding picture production will be shown. The interest created by preceding numbers is intensified by each succeeding number. In episode No. 7 the heroine is captured and rescued in one of the most exciting climaxes ever produced in a motion picture. The battle wages more fiercely. Sharper becomes the fight of wits. The "Black Hundred" now resort to the auto bandits. Having discovered that Florence rides horseback every morning, accompanied only by her riding master, they form a new attack. Florence and the riding master ride along the river road. A fire alarm causes the riding master to flee back to his stable. Florence rides on alone. The trap was worked and after some exciting action, Florence is found in the tools of the bandits, a prisoner in a lonely hut. Norton appearing on

JANE WOLFE EQUALLY GOOD IN CHARACTERS AS IN LEADING ROLES

Kalem Star, Known to All Movie Fans, Was With First Permanent Stock Company

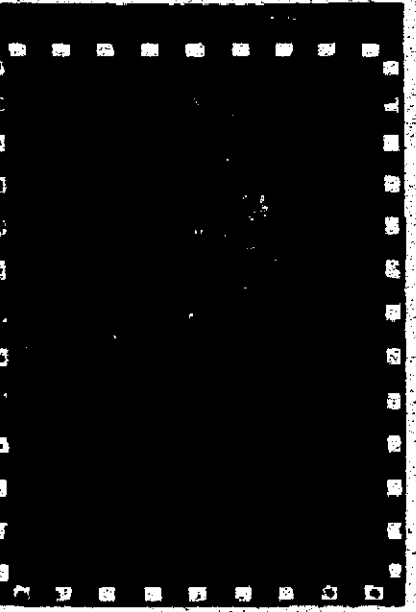

Foremost in every move which characterized the progress of motion pictures, Kalem was the first to originate a permanent stock company of artists and send it to a distant point. Prominent in this original company was Miss Jane Wolfe, well known to every patron of the picture theater, and loyal in her continued service with Kalem.

Miss Wolfe came to the Kalem company with a record of many artistic creations in Broadway successes and enviable achievements in stock, which afforded ample opportunities for her versatility. No higher tribute could be paid Miss Wolfe's art than the statement that she appears simultaneously as a charming leading woman and in any difficult character which the production may require. Her protean ability is attested by the fact that her features are seldom to be recognized in the characters which she portrays. As an impoverished peasant woman, she reminds one of Emma Dunn as "Ase" in Richard Mansfield's production of "Peter Gyn." Stepping into another picture theater, one may find Miss Wolfe as a charming comedienne or a captivating leading lady.

Miss Wolfe's great success is the result of high ideals, unflagging ambition, and continued hard work. She has just earned the praise which is bestowed upon her at every hand, and it will be such artists as she that place the motion picture drama upon a plane with the legitimate stage.

the scene of the fire, sees the riding master return alone, fears treachery, jumps into an auto and speeds out over the river road. He traces the signs of struggling to the lonely hut, smashes in the door, fights a terrific battle with the guarding bandit and wins. In addition to this feature there is a two-reel Kay Bee, "An Eleventh Hour Reformation," a production of intense dramatic value.

GERMANY DECLARES WAR ON RUSSIA

WOMEN WEEP AS SOLDIERS GO TO FRONT

French Army Mobilized for Immediate Service in the European Crisis

PEOPLE GLAMOR FOR WAR

All Conveyances in Paris Are Requisitioned; Thousands
Unable to Leave

PARIS, Aug. 1.—Thrilling scenes were witnessed here tonight after the slow postcards were posted announcing the mobilization of French forces.
Hordes appeared as though by magic
and formed processions on the boulevards, carrying flags and singing the Marseillaise. Here and there in the arching crowd were groups of men who raised the cry, "On to Berlin."
At the hotels, the news of the ordering of mobilization caused the greatest commotion. Visitors began to leave the hostelry en masse, but found it difficult to obtain conveyances. Cab-men offered the services of their vehicles at auction, accepting as fares
the highest bidders. They did a profitable business.

No Means of Escape.
At 6 o'clock a report that the gates of the Northern railroad had been closed caused consternation among the throng of persons eager to leave Paris.
It was impossible to get into telephonic communication with the station, and when the long lines of cabs and other conveyances arrived they were great excellent business.

Barriers Finally Opens.
At last, however, the barrier was opened and there was a rush by the throng to board the train, children being ignored in the stampede along the platform. The train was filled to overflowing in a moment. There were many heartrending scenes in the station, as women, with tears streaming down their cheeks bade good-bye to husbands and family ties were broken.
To add to the gloom of the journey,
there was no dining car attached to the train, all the attendants having gone to join their regiments. Hence there was no prospect of food or drink on the journey. The only subject of conversation on board the train was the coming war.

Fears were expressed by some of the more timorous passengers that the enroute might be blown up or some other disaster happen to prevent the train from reaching the frontier. One Amer-

RUSSIANS IN FRENZY OVER PROCLAMATION

St. Petersburg Is Filled With Thousands of Animated Demonstrators

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 1.—Germany's declaration of war against Russia has provoked in the Russian capital a wonderful demonstration of patriotic enthusiasm.
The German ambassador, Count von Pourtalles, at 7:30 o'clock tonight, in the name of his government, sent to the Russian minister of foreign affairs
official notification of the declaration of war, and two hours later an announcement to this effect was made to the people.
Tonight the capital presents a picture of extraordinary animation. The Nevsky Prospect and all the leading thoroughfares are filled with war-rented people, marching in processions, carrying portraits of the emperor, with flags waving and torches flaming. From time to time there is an outbreak of cheering and singing.
Speakers, fired with patriotic fervor, harangue the crowds. In front of the Kazan cathedral, each procession halts and a sudden hush falls over the pro-cessionists, then the strains of the national anthem, sung in perfect harmony
by the entire section of the procession,
fill the air, the crowds listening silently
with bared heads. Then the procession moves forward and the demonstrators begin again with renewed ardor.

WAR BULLETINS

BERLIN, Aug. 1.—A German patrol near Proskien was fired on this afternoon by a Russian frontier patrol. The Germans returned the fire. There were no losses.
ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 1.—Count von Pourtales and the entire staff of the German embassy left St. Petersburg tonight after the declaration of war had been delivered.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Germany, Great Britain and France have formally asked the United States to take charge of their embassies throughout the theater of hostilities "in case of emergency."
The United States will act for the powers involved and American ambassadors and ministers abroad are being instructed.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—A Paris dispatch to the Central News agency, by indirect route, reports that Premier Viviani has made changes in the French cabinet whereby Theophile Delcasse becomes minister of war and Eugene Georges Clemenceau, the ex-premier, joins the ministry.

MANCHESTER, Mass., Aug. 1.—Dr.
Constantin Theodore Dumba, the ambassador of Austria-Hungary, sent a telegram to Washington tonight requesting the state department to take charge of his country's embassies in Russia, France and Montenegro, in case of a severance of relations with those countries.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 1.—The

been ordered not to sail. The Kosmos

FIRST CLASH BETWEEN THE GERMANS AND RUSSIANS OCCURS

CONFLICT MAY SPREAD UNTIL SMALLER NA-TIONS OF EUROPE BECOME INVOLVED; AUSTRO-SERBIAN CONTROVERSY OVER-SHADOWED BY DEVELOPMENTS

LONDON, Aug. 2 (Sunday). The Germans have invaded the duchy of Luxemburg. They seized the government offices and telephones.

LONDON, Aug. 2 (Sunday). News of a German invasion of Luxemburg has reached London in a Reuter Telegraph company dispatch from Brussels. No details are given.
Luxemburg is distant 117 miles southeast of Brussels, with its borders on Germany and France.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Events in the European crisis developed today with startling rapidity. The German ultimatum to Russia, demanding that Russia cease the mobilization of its army, expired at noon, and at 5:15 o'clock in the afternoon the German emperor signed a mobilization order.

At 7:30 o'clock the German ambassador at St. Petersburg, Count von Pourtales, delivered a declaration of war in the name of his government to the Russian government, and the entire staff of the embassy immediately left St. Petersburg.

Although, after the warlike speeches delivered by the German emperor and the imperial chancellor at Berlin on Friday,
no other result could be expected, hopes that the dread event
might be avoided had been raised by the intervention of King George in St. Petersburg, and the fact that the German reichstag was not to be convened until Tuesday. Hence, the actual declaration of war had not been expected for another day or two.

France Certain to Be Involved.
Now the die is cast, and Europe is to be plunged into a general war which has been the apprehension of European statesmen for generations. It is now only a question of how soon a state of actual war will exist between Germany and France.
It is not known at exactly what hour Germany's ultimatum to France, asking that country to define what attitude she would assume in case of war by Germany and Austria against Russia, was to expire, but it is believed it will not be long before diplomatic relations will be ruptured or war declared.

EMPEROR CLAIMS HE MADE SUPREME EFFORTS FOR PEACE

The German emperor and his advisers have maintained to the last that they made supreme efforts for the sake of peace and that the last of the series of earnest appeals from Emperor William to Emperor Nicholas was a telegram regulating responsibility for the casu-lty threatened the world, on the ground that Germany is engaged in mediating with Austria-Hungary at Russia's request and stating Russia, by her general mobilization, was threatening Germany's safety.

The first shots in the Russo-German war were exchanged between patrols
this afternoon near Proskien, 120 miles to the southeast of Konigsberg.
The only redeeming feature of the darkest prospect with which Europe has been faced for half a century is that Italy has declared her neutrality.
But how long that neutrality can be maintained is a debatable question.

GREAT BRITAIN WILL NOT GO TO FRANCE'S ASSISTANCE

Great Britain's position has already been defined by Premier Asquith in the British parliament. He declared that she is under no formal obligation to go to the assistance of France in the event of a European war. The British government, however, has made full preparation for whatever may happen.
The present position, therefore, is that Russia, France and Serbia are allied on one side against Austria-Hungary and Germany on the other.
How long the warfare will be confined to this plane, it is impossible to foretell. Nor can it be foretold whether Belgium and Holland will be able to maintain their neutrality against their powerful neighbors, or whether Great Britain will find herself compelled to send an expeditionary force to attempt to preserve that neutrality.

Another factor which has as yet not been given much consideration is the attitude of Turkey, which, if she has sufficiently recovered from the effects of her late war with Italy, may be able to throw considerable weight into the scale. It is generally understood that Germany has an effective understanding with Turkey which may lead to interesting developments.

ALL FOREIGNERS EXCEPT AUSTRIANS AND GERMANS ALLOWED TO LEAVE FRANCE

PARIS, Aug. 1.—All foreigners may leave Paris or France before the end of the first day of mobilization, by train, but not by automobile. Those desiring to leave France may do so by certain trains, the time tables of which are posted on the walls of Paris
tonight, or by sea.
American citizens or British subjects may remain in France except in the regions on the eastern frontier and near certain fortresses provided they make declarations to the police and obtain a special permit from the police. The police will make exceptions in the cases of Austrians and Germans, who will be taken to special refuge depots in western France,
where they will be lodged and fed and,
if possible, provided with work. Later they will be allowed to leave by a neutral frontier. Any person breaking these rules will be executed.

EASTERN ROADS TO GET ADVANCE

PARTIAL INCREASE TO BE ALLOWED

Applies to Restricted Area and Certain Classes and Commodities

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—In a divided opinion today, the interstate commerce commission granted some of the 5 per cent freight rate increases asked by the eastern railroads and denied others.
Increases will apply in the territory
north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers and from a vertical line drawn through Buffalo and Pittsburgh, west as far as the Mississippi river. All class rates and many commodity rates are increased 5 per cent in that section. No advances whatever were permitted east from Buffalo and Pittsburgh to the Atlantic seaboard. That excludes from the area from which the rails will receive the greatest traffic producing centers of the country.

Two Favor General Increase.
Commissioners Daniels and McChord
dissented from the majority opinion.
Mr. Daniels held that a 5 per cent increase should have been general—that the railroads were entitled to it to meet the high cost of living. Mr. Mc-Chord held that the reasons which the majority held to warrant an increase west of Pittsburgh applied equally to the territory east.

The majority, headed by Chairman
Harlan, held, as to rates west of Pittsburg, that they were the lowest in the country and warranted an increase.
While it was held that the income of the eastern railroads was smaller than demanded in public interest, no showing had been made warranting a general increase.

Need of Advance.
The real relief, the commission held,
for the New England roads, and those in central freight association territory was financial reorganization upon a sound basis. It was held that rather than raising freight rates, the railroads should discontinue costly free services to shippers, develop efficiency of personnel and equipment, stop giving free passes and possibly increase their passenger fares to keep pace with the high grade service the public demands.

The "crisis," which railroad managers protested was confronting them,
was pronounced to have little foundation. The commission denounced what it characterized as a propaganda to influence its decision and added that there was no doubt it had "seriously aggravated the present commercial depression."
Means 1/2 Per Cent Raise.
Such advances as are allowed are expected to increase the income of the railroads about 1 1/2 per cent. Such principal east and west roads as the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Erie and Baltimore and Ohio will benefit by the advances to the extent that they have lines running from the east over into the territory in which the advances apply.
Coal, which alone comprises more than one-half the total traffic of the railroads, will have no advance. Neither will coke, brick, tile, clay, starch, cement, iron ore and plaster. Neither will there be any increases on lake and rail rates.
The contention of the railroads that their revenues under the present scale
of rates are inadequate is sustained.

U. S. WOULD LEND ITS GOOD OFFICES TO RESTORE PEACE

Ambassadors in European Capitals to Look After Interests of All

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—War developments in Europe overshadowed all else today and tonight in attention of official Washington. Steps to prevent a financial stricture in this country as a result of Europe's sudden need for gold were followed by a series of precautionary measures designed to protect Americans and their interests abroad as well as at home.
President Wilson and Secretary
Bryan studied a mass of dispatches
from American embassies, legations and consular in Europe. While no formal tender of good offices has been made to any power, American diplomats abroad are keeping the state department closely advised, so that if an opportunity presents itself, the influence of the United States for a settlement in care have asked the United States to take the problems by pacific means will be actively exerted.

Ambassadors Active.

Ambassadors Page at London. Pen-field at Vienna, Herrick at Paris and Gerard at Berlin were particularly active during the day conferring with officials of the various foreign offices.
They are at work in the interests of peace and thus far have been acting on their own initiative. In their dispatches to the state department, they made various suggestions, but until the situation develops further, no decisive step in diplomacy will be taken by the Washington government.
The Washington government, however, instructed its diplomatic representatives abroad to do everything in their power with propriety to avert the conflict. The instructions were to counsel for peace and calmness wherever it was possible in an informal way.
Germany, France, Great Britain and practically all the other governments of Europe which may become involved in the struggle have asked the United States to take for their diplomatic interests in these countries which which they may be compelled to sever relations. The United States has accepted
every request of this kind.
In this way the United States gov-

BANKERS TRYING TO PREVENT CRASH ON ACCOUNT WAR SCARE

Relief Measures Under Way to Restore Confidence on Part of Public

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Extraordinary action was taken by the leading financial interests of America today to avert financial unsettlement in this country as a result of the European war. Relief measures are under way which, in the opinion of the banks, will preserve
the public confidence.

Emergency currency probably will be put into circulation next week. If occasion requires, this currency, issuance of which is provided for by the Alder-ich-Vreeland act passed after the 1907 panic, may be supplemented here and elsewhere by clearing house certificates
such as were used in 1907.
Representatives of New York foreign exchange houses left tonight for Washington to hold a Sunday conference with President Wilson. They planned to suggest the unprecedented procedure of advancing $100,000,000
credit to England.

Bankers Meet Tomorrow.

Bankers from the principal cities of the country arranged a meeting to be held in Washington on Monday to formulate a plan of action.
It was a day of strenuous activity.
Not unmoved by anxiety for the bankers of New York. The European crisis demoralized the financial markets of the world a week ago and the intricacies of modern finance are such that upon America, isolated from the perils
of war, fell a full share of the burden.
Liquidation of American stocks by European holders not only upset this stock market so completely that it was compelled to suspend business, but raised another serious problem. That problem was to pay Europe for the stocks sold here.
It is estimated by representatives of foreign stock exchange houses that from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 worth of American stocks were thrown on this market for whatever they would bring by panic-stricken European holders. Canada also unloaded stocks here to a large extent.
Next week the bills drawn against these sales of stock will reach New York. Part of the $150,000,000 gold

BARNUM & BAYLEY CIRCUS

Barnum and Bayley circus trains, comprising 90 cars, will reach Colorado Springs today. The equipment will be taken to the show grounds, where the circus will be established in its temporary home.

Many novelties and features are announced in preliminary information. Much stress is laid upon the sensational features which form an important part of the performance. These are described as the mikado's troupe of royal Japanese athletes and jugglers; the elephants' baseball club; and the first appearance in America of Italy's famous equestrian, the rider who made all Europe laugh, Signor Bagonghi, the Apollo Belvidere of the circus arena.

Among the arena artists are the Davenport family of equestrian celebrities, the Braden family, sensational bareback riders, the 10-Vienese in an old-world aerial novelty; the Flying Neapolitans; the fearless Silbons; the Bird-Millman troupe of high-wire experts; the Weiss troupe in a novel acrobatic specialty; John Ducander's school of beautiful manage horses; and Josephson, the perfect man in feats of Olympic wrestling.

Of riders there will be a score or more. They are said to be the champions of all countries and of all schools of equestrianism.

OPERA HOUSE

"The Cid" will be shown tomorrow. Pedro Mendes, an ignorant Mexican farmer, refuses to enroll either with the federalists or revolutionary army. The extent of his knowledge of his country terminates with the confines of his farm. On a trip to town to purchase supplies he sees a company of soldiers drilling. He wonders what it is all about, but says nothing to his mother and wife about the matter, to both of whom he is greatly devoted. A week later a detachment of federals arrive, seize off his cattle and fowls, and when he attempts to object to their wholesale deprivation, he is knocked down and kicked by the soldiers. Hardly have they departed when firing is heard. At the first reports, Pedro runs into the house. The revolutionists having been worsted in a skirmish with the federals, advance and make a fortification of his farm. In the conflict that follows his home is completely destroyed and his wife and mother are killed. Dragging them out of the burn-

There will be an important meeting of all those interested in the distribution of Bibles on Gideon day, August 16, this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. Plans for Gideon day will be mapped out and committees appointed. The Rev. S. E. Brewster will address the meeting and information of interest to every committeeman will be given out.

EUROPEAN CRISIS AS SEEN BY EX-ATTACHE IN CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Ex-Attache in Chicago Tribune. When Archduke Francis Ferdinand was assassinated at Sarajevo, just a month ago, the horror aroused by the circumstances of his murder was tempered by the impression that his death contributed to the peace of Europe through the removal of a disturbing factor from international politics.

So imbued were the leading statesmen of the old world with the sense of all that there was aggressive, masterful, and hellacious in his character, that they had looked forward to the eventualities of his succession to the crown as certain to precipitate war.

It would seem as if the archduke's prejudice to the cause of peace is extending beyond his grave; for his death at the hands of Serb assassins, instigated and furnished with arms and funds by Servians high in office at Belgrade, has put an end to the empire of an ultimatum by the dual empire to the Serbian government, which the latter has rejected, preferring the alternative of war.

It is an ultimatum which has been denounced in this country as brutal, and there appears to be a tendency in America to sympathize with Servia as being the under dog and as pitifully weak compared with the might and power of Austria-Hungary. But the provocation which the latter has had to endure on the part of Servia should be taken into consideration.

Like Mexican Case

"If Mexico, for instance, in addition to all sorts of hostile discrimination against American economic and political interests, covering a period of years, as well as a long series of diplomatic and consular affronts, had given official encouragement and support to a popular movement having for its avowed object the annexation of Texas, New Mexico and California; had encouraged disaffection among the millions of Latin-Americans living in those states against Uncle Sam, and had tolerated a conspiracy in Mexico City of high Mexican officials against the lives of the president and vice president of the United States, resulting in the murder of the latter by Mexican assassins, armed with pistols and bombs, hurled by the government arsenal in Mexico, and furnished with funds by important Mexican dignitaries of state, the ultimatum which would have been addressed from Washington to Mexico would have been even more sharp and brutal than that presented by Austria to Servia, for reasons of an identically similar character.

All that the dual empire demanded in its ultimatum was that those Servian officials actually incriminated in the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand be brought to justice; that the Pan-Servian society, which openly aims at the annexation to Servia of the Austrian provinces of Herzegovina and Bosnia through war or rebellion, should be suppressed by royal decree; and that the Servian government and people should abandon their policy of hostility, insult, and provocation.

It is because the Servian government has declined to comply with these by no means extravagant demands contained in the ultimatum that the dual empire is about to inaugurate what is proclaimed to be a war, not of conquest, but of retribution.

Austria has once more caught the concert of Europe napping, and has taken even her ally as much by surprise as in 1908, when, without any warning, she announced the incorporation into the dual empire of Herzegovina and Bosnia, which had been entrusted to her military occupation, civil administration, and economic development by the international congress of Berlin in 1878.

Caught Europe Napping

When Austria's ultimatum was presented to the Servian government, the German kaiser was cruising on board the Hohenzollern along the coast of Norway; the president of the French republic was steaming across the Baltic on board a French battleship, en route from St. Petersburg to Stockholm for the purpose of paying a visit there to the king and queen of Sweden.

The czar was yachting with his wife and children in Finnish waters. King Victor Emmanuel had retired with the queen and their daughters to his favorite seaside retreat of San Remo, in northern Italy, while King Peter of Servia had abandoned the reins of government temporarily to his second son, the crown prince, and had taken himself to a thermal resort in a remote portion of his dominions to recuperate his health.

Only Ferdinand of Bulgaria seems to have had an inkling of what was in the wind, just as in 1908. On that occasion, Austria's annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina was immediately followed by his proclamation of himself as king and by his casting off of his vassalage to the suzerainty of the sublime Porte, while, in this instance, he telegraphed early last week from Sofia, canceling all the arrangements he had made to attend certain Coburg family celebrations in Austria on the ground that the grave political conditions would not admit of his leaving his capital.

Cause for Sudden Action

If Austria's ultimatum was so sudden, it was because she had unexpectedly obtained conclusive evidence of the truth of her suspicions to the effect that several high Servian officials, and, it is added, indeed, even a member of the reigning house of Servia, namely, the king's eldest son, ex-Crown Prince George, had been the instigators, the organizers, and financial backers of the plot which resulted in the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand.

The proofs were of such a startling character that prompt action was imperative—so much so that Emperor Francis Joseph did not have time to warn his close ally, the kaiser.

Servia has rejected Austria's ultimatum not only because she is assured of the backing and support of Russia, which was denied her in 1909, when her aggressive and provocative attitude toward the dual empire almost caused the latter to invade King Peter's dominions, but also because it is the only alternative to national bankruptcy.

The moratorium promulgated on the outbreak of the Balkan war with Turkey two years ago still remains in force in Servia. A moratorium such as this provides for the postponement, in the event of the payment of all debts and obligations, the indefinite extension of all taxes, and the suspension of all civil proceedings for the recovery of money or property.

Of course, this is equivalent to the arrest of all trade, commerce, and, in a lesser degree, industry. The Servian government has realized for some time that it could not continue this moratorium condition much longer. It has feared that the inevitable hour of reckoning, when it came, would result in such popular upheaval and chaos that the throne and state would be swept out of existence.

Servia Welcomes War

That is why the Servian government welcomes a war with Austria, providing it is assured of Russia's support, for, whereas the maintenance of peace and the consequent cessation of the moratorium spells inevitable ruin and disaster, there is a chance in the eyes of Servia that, with Russia's assistance, she may emerge victorious from the fray, obtaining, as the fruit of her success, not only the Euxine-inhabited Austrian provinces of Herzegovina and Bosnia, but also those Albanian western portions of the Adriatic which she had seized during the last Balkan war, and from which she was obliged to retire.

It by no means follows that Austria is assured of victory if, as it seems evident, Germany and Russia are drawn into the conflict, as well as France, Italy and possibly even Great Britain. Russia at the present moment, with that experimental mobilization in progress for which the drama two or three months ago voted such a huge sum of money has between four and five million troops actually under arms and could put another two million men into the field if necessary.

Servia, Greece, Montenegro and Roumania are good for another million of seasoned troops to cooperate with those of the czar; for Roumania's king, in spite of the fact that he is a Hohenzollern, has been forced by popular sentiment and by his cabinet, under the alternative of deposition, to cancel his former understanding with the triple alliance and his secret military convention with the latter and to range himself alongside of Russia.

What It Means to Various Powers

Not is it in point of numbers only that the Russo-Balkan coalition has the great advantage of Austria, Germany and Italy being uncertain factors in the triple alliance. For mobilization in Germany and Austria means the withdrawal of men from all the industries of one kind and another and houses of business, completely disorganizing and arresting all manufacture and trade.

Russia and the Balkan states are almost wholly agricultural. The bulk of Russia's population, to the extent of 80 per cent, is of the manly, or peasant class. When these men are withdrawn from their agricultural

Effect on United States

A most important point in the situation is the influence which an international conflagration of this kind in Europe will have upon the United States. From an economic point of view it cannot be denied that a titanic struggle of this nature, while a curse to the old world, will be of incalculable economic benefit to this country. The suspension of huge exports of grain from Russia, especially from the southern portions of the czar's dominions, and of Russian oil, would mean a corresponding increase in the demand upon the United States for these two commodities.

Capital from almost all the principal nations of Europe would seek refuge in this country, where it would go for the development of American industries would abound. Moreover, the suspension of so many European manufacturing industries through the absorption of labor for military purposes, as well as through cessation of credit, would result in a proportionate growth in the demand upon American industries, which would thus have the opportunity, not only to benefit temporarily by the war, but likewise to secure a lasting hold upon the great markets of the world.

purely they leave their work to be done by their old people and by their women. There is no interruption of the staple industry of the nation, namely, agriculture, and the result is that Russia and the Balkan states can keep their armies in the field for much longer than can Germany and Austria, without universal ruin and economic chaos.

Capital from almost all the principal nations of Europe would seek refuge in this country, where it would go for the development of American industries would abound. # CONGRESS ACTS TO ENABLE MOVEMENT OF AMERICAN CROPS

Panama Act Amended so as to Reestablish the Merchant Marine

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—To save transatlantic shipping from paralysis during the European crisis, and avert a threatening blockade of America's bumper crops, President Wilson and congressional leaders today agreed upon an amendment to the Panama canal act which will permit foreign ships to come into American waters. It will be passed for passage Monday without influence of the administration for prompt action.

The bill would eliminate the requirement that a ship must be five years old to get the American registry, would authorize the president to suspend the requirement that all watch officers must be Americans, and suspend the requirement of survey, inspection and measurement of foreign-built ships admitted to American registry.

The bill will take effect immediately upon enactment as an emergency measure. After repealing certain restrictions contained in the Panama act, the bill provides:

What Bill Provides.
"That the president of the United States is hereby authorized, whenever, in his discretion, the needs of foreign commerce may require, to suspend, by order, so far as he may desire, the provisions of the law prescribing that all the watch officers of vessels of the United States registered for foreign trade shall be citizens of the United States."

"Under like condition, in like manner, and to like extent, the president of the United States also is hereby authorized to suspend the provisions of the law requiring survey, inspection and measurement by officers of the United States of foreign-built vessels admitted to American registry under this act."

"This act shall take effect immediately."

No Opposition in Sight.
The bill is not expected to be opposed when unanimous consent for its passage is asked in the house Monday. None of the Democratic leaders favor letting down the bars so as to permit foreign ownership of American registered vessels, and the sentiment developed today was unanimous that all conversions of foreign-built and owned vessels into American-owned and registered ships must be rigidly bona fide.

It was pointed out, unless this position was maintained, there might be grave neutrality complications through ships of belligerent nations temporarily taking out American registry to evade the risks and high marine insurance their own flag might involve.

Only Temporary Relief.
Under international law, all ships of American registry must be owned by American corporations or American citizens. Incidentally, there is nothing in the neutrality laws that prevents American ships carrying grain, cotton and similar noncontrabands to ports of nations that may be at war.

"This is not a bill to build up a great merchant marine in the United States," said Representative Underwood. "It is a temporary measure to relieve an emergency situation, in the event of nations going to war. I hope, however, that it will result in the upbuilding of sufficient public sentiment in this country to bring about the enactment of laws that will restore the merchant marine."

Metal Mines Shut

BUTTE, Mont., Aug. 1.—As a result of the unsettled conditions in the metal markets, domestic and foreign, due to European war clouds, the Great Falls smelter of the Anaconda Copper Mining company suspended yesterday and seven mines were ordered shut down here today.

More than 3,000 men were affected and it was anticipated by mining officials that if the chaotic condition of the markets continued for a week a general suspension of the Butte mines and the Wagon Wheel might result.

BALDNESS AND WHISKERS FOR WOMEN AS RESULT OF SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT

BERLIN, August 1.—Dr. Hans Friedenthal, a famous professor of Berlin university, today described the new woman as he thinks she will be evolved by suffrage and the higher education.

He declares that brain work will cause her to become bald, while increasing masculinity and contempt for beauty will induce the growth of hair on the face.

HUMBERT STIRS UP SENSATION IN FRANCE

Claims Field Artillery Is Inferior to the German Fighting Force

PARIS, August 1.—The sensation of the hour is the severe criticism of the French army made by Charles Humbert, a member of the army committee in the senate. M. Humbert said that the French field artillery was becoming inferior to that of Germany. "As regards the garrison artillery," said the speaker, "our position is no better. The garrison commanders have for a long time been asking in vain for an increase in their stores." M. Humbert declared the French army with armored forces which were inferior to those furnished to foreign countries. He said that the supply of ammunition for the army was insufficient.

They were also short of two million pairs of boots. If war broke out, soldiers would have to start for the front with no boots but those on their feet, a pair of ammunition boots made 30 years ago. At the present moment, however, they had only sufficient equipment to wear the M. 16 and the M. 17. The fortifications of the forts from Toulon and Verdun had not been improved since 1875.

M. Humbert concluded by saying that the millions for which parliament had been asked for national defense had been entirely wasted. Minister's Answer.

JAURES' ASSASSIN IS MENTALLY IRRESPONSIBLE

PARIS, Aug. 1.—Altenists who today examined Raoul Villain, the assassin of M. Jaures, the Socialist leader, declared him abnormal mentally, and partially, at least, irresponsible.

G.N. CARRANZA SAYS NO PRIESTS HAVE BEEN KILLED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Official dispatches to the state department from General Carranza state that no French priests were either killed or imprisoned at Zacatecas. It has been suggested, however, that his report does not cover the question raised by the complaints of the Christian Brothers, and transmitted by the United States to the Constitutionalists. The Christian Brothers is a lay order, and includes no priest in its ranks.

DENVER POLO TEAM
EXPECTS TO DEFEAT
COLO. SPRINGS FOURCheyenne Mountain Club Not Making Plans Very Rapidly

DENVER, Aug. 1.—The Denver Country Club polo team had an unusually satisfactory workout here this afternoon, and unless the teams to play here in competition in the tournament starting August 24 get extremely active at once, Denver is likely to repeat the success of last year when the Prairie Dogs captured all the cups in sight.

With Bulkeley Wells, J. Foster Symes, D. Bryant Turner and Joshua Crane from Dedham, Mass., and a player of international reputation, representing Denver, the Kansas City Coronado and Sheridan, Wyo., teams are going against a hard proposition. Little or nothing can be learned concerning the organization of the Colorado Springs team. The only certainty is that John Hobbs, who never goes back on his word, will play back. Foxhall Keene is expected to be present in the Springs, although nothing definite has been heard from him.

It is said that Dr. Gerald Webb will not play this season, which leaves No. 1 open. Berrie, Huston, who is at Glenwood, has been suggested, but has not accepted. He has magnificent mounts, and would be welcomed, it is said, if he could be secured.

Joe Harrison has an excellent string and, if he could be induced to play, would make a most acceptable No. 2. The local tournament is well under way, with the exception of the definition of the place and intentions of the Springs.

Princeton Players Win Doubles; Miss Browne Is Victor Over Her Sister

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—George N. Church and Dean Mather, of the Princeton players, won the western championship in men's doubles here today by beating Heath Byford and Ralph Burdick of Chicago in a sensational match. The fourth set was not finished until after sundown, the score being 14 games to 12. The score of the match: 6-1, 3-6, 6-4, 14-12.

Miss Mary Browne of Los Angeles won the women's western title by beating her sister, Mrs. R. H. Williams of Chicago, 6-4, 6-3, and with Mrs. Williams won the doubles championship, winning from Mrs. C. N. Beard and Miss Miriam Steever in the final round, 6-2, 5-2.

ZOOZ PLAY DENVER W. O. W.
THIS AFTERNOON AT 2:15Geiser Probably Back on Third. Having Steadied Down; Fusick Will Hurl for the Locals

The strong Woodmen of the World team of Denver game No. 1 will play the Zooz this afternoon at 2:15 o'clock. The Denver team is a semipro organization that has shown exceptional strength this season, defeating the Kilmara and Cincinella, two of which teams gave the Zooz hard battles.

The lineup of the locals is not definite, but Fusick will do the hurling burden and Jack Vernon will take his throws. Third base and shortstop are not certain, but probably Geiser will be put on the third cushion, having shown better form there recently than in the early season games. Fred Hastings and Miller will make up the outfield. Fowler will be on the first sack, Schneider on second. Stock, the local shortstop, is sick and will be unable to play here, but some other Denver infielder will be on duty.

WANT 1915 MEET

Following the success of the annual convention of the Federation of American Motorcyclists just held in St. Louis, cities are already beginning to bid for the 1915 meet. Chief among these is Birmingham, Ala., whose riders believe that the southern city is entitled to next year's assembly. San Francisco is also mentioned for the 1915 meet, as this would give the riders an opportunity to visit the exposition as well as attend the motorcycle convention.

Gunboat Smith About to Land Foul on Carpenter

This is the photograph the camera caught of the start of the famous foul blow by which Gunboat Smith lost to Georges Carpentier in their fight in the Olympia in London. A tenth of a second after it was delivered Carpentier's manager was on his way into the ring to claim a foul.

The picture seems to indicate that Smith meant to hit Carpentier while the latter was down. It is just possible though that Smith had his arm drawn back to catch Carpentier's moment he raised his fingers from the floor. The rules of fighting require that one man must step back while the other is down, and in that Smith failed to do that he violated the rules. But this violation happens so often that little attention is paid to it.

Smith's arm was seemingly drawn back to get into the punch—a favorite right swing—all the power he had. He may have been so excited that he didn't know what he was doing. Smith has been a foul fighter in the United States, but referees have not had sufficient courage to disqualify him.

Most of those who saw the fight insist that the blow was not hard enough to hurt, that it glanced. Such being the case, it was only a technical foul, and these are disregarded constantly in the United States. As a general rule an unintentional foul which does no damage seldom calls for more than a reprimand and a threat from the referee.

While the photograph shows that a foul was probably committed, it does not settle the question if it was of sufficient importance to cause the loss of a fight.

European War Puts End to Talk of Fall Tour
of Baseball Selections

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—A proposed tour in Europe in the fall by all-German and all-Irish baseball clubs probably will be called off, it was said today at headquarters of the Chicago American league club. Ted Sullivan, manager of the late world tour by the Chicago Americans and New York Nationals, is marooned in Europe by the suspension of transatlantic steamer sailings. Cable messages were sent to Sullivan today by the management of the White Sox but it was said that none of them could be delivered. Sullivan was thought to be in England on his way to Ireland to arrange dates for the proposed tour.

NDONERS SHOCKED BY LATE WAR NEWS

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Pleasure-loving donors, issuing by thousands from the theaters tonight, were confronted by screaming newspaper placards denouncing that Germany had declared war on Russia. For the first time the significance of the late overhang of Europe appeared to strike the ordinary citizen with full force, and he began with real seriousness to ask himself what part England was to play in the great drama or tragedy.

People stopped on the sidewalks in groups, discussing the unexpected news, but there were no demonstrations, except here and there collisions between little bands of Germans and Frenchmen as the result of their patriotic ardor.

The "Pais-Union" please of the London police was heard when the outbreaks occurred, and the crowd slowly dispersed.

The greatest excitement was observed in the numerous foreign restaurants of the west end.

St. Louis' taxable property valuation is now $577,496,671, of which $94,731 is personally.

which prevail here—one advocating that England hold aloof and seek only to protect Dutch and Belgian neutrality, and the other arguing that the entente with France entails England's going to the assistance of France. That country is attacked by Germany. Despite the official view that there is a friendly feeling between England and Germany, it is impossible to avoid observing among the general public deep-seated antagonism against that country.

FRENCH PREMIER AND GERMAN MINISTER CONFER.

PARIS, Aug. 1.—During the course of their second interview today, Premier Viviani said to the German ambassador, Baron von Schoen, the ambassador did not reply, and M. Viviani continued.

This attitude of your government has dictated ours. We are compelled to take precautions similar to yours. Our peaceful intentions remain unchanged. We wish peace and the best proof we can give you of this is that at the present moment the French parliament has not been convened. Under our constitution we should be compelled to convene it if our intentions were not peaceful. Baron von Schoen returned. "But frontier incidents are unfortunately to be feared."

Premier Viviani replied: "How can you suppose such things? Our troops are five miles from the frontier. We are, in fact, exposed on our frontier and there is not another power in the world which would have consented to do such a thing." (This refers to the withdrawal of the French troops from the immediate frontier.)

The premier proceeded to point out that the German troops were at the very foot of the frontier posts, and said he concluded from this that if incidents occurred they could only be provoked by the German military forces.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—(Sunday)—The Daily Telegraph in a special Sunday edition, says that Austria on Saturday afternoon signified her formal acceptance of Sir Edward Grey's proposal for a conference.

Official acceptance, of course, has had no effect, says the paper. "Since Germany has declared war and was a step taken at the last moment by Austria, probably with the view, as far as possible, of putting herself right before the world, well knowing that the situation was beyond redemption."

U. S. MAY SEND GOLD AND SHIPS FOR AMERICANS

STAMPSCOTT, Mass., Aug. 1.—Rustem Bey, the Turkish ambassador, who is spending his vacation here, said tonight that in his opinion Turkey would soon become involved in war with Serbia. He expressed the opinion that a general European war was probable and that, notwithstanding the fact that Turkey had recently signed a treaty with the Serbs, his country would again be arrayed in arms against them.

final decision until tomorrow, when they will confer again and get the opinion of the bankers who usually serve the state department abroad in normal times.

If necessary, the Washington government is prepared to send American vessels abroad with gold for the relief of Americans. Immediately after the conference with the president, Mr. Bryan called all consulates, legations and embassies to spare no pains in aiding for Americans who remained in the war zones and giving every facility to those who wished to leave.

State department officials admitted that the most serious problem confronting them was the plight of Americans abroad. They estimated that at least 100,000, and perhaps as many as 300,000, are scattered throughout Europe.

Suffragettes Disregard Warning; Try to Wreck Ancient English Church

BELFAST, Ireland, Aug. 1.—Militant suffragettes today disobeyed the orders issued by the Women's Social and Political Union requesting members to refrain from militant acts during the international crisis and made an attempt to destroy the ancient cathedral at Lismur.

The women placed a quantity of dynamite beneath a window of the chancel. The thick wall resisted the explosion, but a rare stained glass window was shattered and a large quantity of masonry was damaged.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Cable messages from Americans abroad received by the Associated Press tonight suggested action by the American government of some character that will assist them to return home. A message from Howard Carroll, a well-known New York author and business man, sent in behalf of himself and other Americans and dated Dover, England, recited the plight in which they find themselves by reason of the paralysis of the transatlantic passenger service. It suggested that Washington take steps to arrange with the powers a true for passenger sailings from the various European ports to the U. S.

EMPEROR WILLIAM ADDRESSES 50,000 PEOPLE IN BERLIN

BERLIN, Aug. 2 (Sunday)—Emperor William, speaking from a window of the castle last night to the crowds beneath, said:

"I thank you for the love and loyalty shown me. When I enter upon a fight let all party strife cease. We are German brothers, and nothing else. All parties have attacked me in times of peace. I forgive them with all my heart. I hope and wish that the good German sword will emerge victorious in the right."

The emperor's speech was greeted with tumultuous cheering.

The imperial chancellor also addressed the assembly, saying:

"All stand as one man for the emperor, whatever our opinions or credos. I am sure that all young German men are ready to shed their blood for the fame and greatness of Germany. We can only trust in God, who hitherto has always given us victory."

An imperial decree convokes the reichstag on August 4. Throughout yesterday afternoon Unter Den Linden seemed to be the rendezvous for all Berlin. An enormous crowd gathered there and gazing the notable personages whom the exciting events of the day were bringing constantly to the castle.

Last night it is estimated 50,000 persons were gathered in front of the castle. They cheered the emperor and sang patriotic songs until he appeared at a window. A perfect tornado of cheers greeted him. Then he made his address.

The speech was thrice interrupted by cheering and handclapping, and the emperor bowed in all directions in acknowledgment of the ovation and returned from the window amid a renewal of frenzied demonstration.

WAR STRENGTH OF SERBIA IS 467,630; EVERY MAN SOLDIER

From the Chicago Herald.

Military service in Serbia is compulsory and universal. Recruits enlist at the age of 21, and complete their service when 45.

The national army has three "bans": First, from 21 to 30 years; second, 30 to 35; and third, 35 to 45.

Besides these, there is a "levee en masse," or "last defense," containing all males between the ages of 18 and 41 who have not yet passed through the regular army, and all other males between 45 and 60.

The kingdom of Serbia is divided into five divisions, containing in peace, 20 infantry regiments, each of three battalions and four companies; and a section of quick-firing, machine guns; five field artillery regiments, each of nine batteries of four guns; one regiment of howitzers of six batteries (one of them mortar); two batteries of horse artillery; one park of siege artillery; one division of cavalry of four regiments, with four sections of quick-firing machine guns; two battalions of engineers, and a park of aeroplanes.

VILLA NOT INVITED TO ENTER CAPITAL WITH THE REBELS

EL PASO, Tex., Aug. 1.—General Villa has not been invited, officially or unofficially, by General Carranza to take part in the entry of the Constitutionalists into Mexico City. This was learned definitely today. It explained, in part at least, the delay in moving his forces south. Villa could not reach the national capital for several weeks on account of railroad conditions, while troops of the other divisions practically are at the gates of the city.

It was learned also that Villa has been recruiting an average of 400 men daily at Chihuahua City. The recruits come from all parts of Villa's zone. Several hundred came from the Guerrero district. Villa's old stamping ground, which he visited recently, apparently on a social mission. Arms and ammunition in large quantities are arriving daily at Chihuahua City.

Reports from Aguas Calientes today told of disturbed conditions below that point. Albeo Puentes, the Constitutional governor, believes travel to the south unsafe. Gen. Pascual Orozco with at least 1,000 federal irregulars is terrorizing the country below the state capital. The forces of General Obregon, Calles' veteran son-in-law, were reported at Trujillo, south of Guadalupe, and only a short distance from the national capital.

BASEBALL MEN STAND TO LOSE TWO MILLION
1914 Will Be Disastrous to Pocketbooks
FEDERALS WILL DROP $800,000 FIRST YEAR

By FRANK G. MENKE.
 With the season more than half over it seems a certainty that the majority of the managers in the National American and Federal leagues will suffer losses that may reach a total of $2,000,000 while the major league losses will amount to $800,000. The season has been a disaster to the baseball men. Nineteen hundred and fourteen will be written on the pages as the most disastrous year in the history of the national games due to small attendance, huge salaries and many postponed games.
 But in what a different spirit do the managers take these losses. In the American and National leagues, where the majority of owners have been used to reaping in huge profits, each year, the losses have been a bitter-sounding word ever and anon. The managers in the Federal league, however, take their losses laconically—almost cheerfully. They entered into the baseball business knowing they would lose money in their first year out. So it is no surprise or disappointment to find the owners larger than the income. In fact, they seem cheerful over the fact that their losses are not as large as they had anticipated.
 In the National league, only the Giants seem to have made money up to this writing, and their earnings so far are said to be only half of those for the same period in the past three years.
Cubs Might Break Even.
 If the Cubs can keep up their present pace, and act as runners up for the leaders, they may get through the season with only a small loss, or may even break a few thousand dollars ahead of the game. This condition was not thought possible six weeks ago because the Cubs were in a rut and the Windy city fans had declared a boycott on them. But since they have performed a "comeback" the fans are flocking to see the Chicago athletes in action again.
 Despite the game fight being made by the Cardinals, and their high position in the race during the first three months, it is unlikely that they will escape without a loss. But it will be less than in other years and much less than the Cardinals owners expected when the Feds invaded the town.
 The Reds drew well when they were considerably among those present, but since they slumped, the attendance both at home and abroad, has been small, and Garry Herrmann's band looks to lose $35,000 or so.
$50,000 Loss at Pittsburgh.
 The Pirates made money earlier in the year, but since the slump the fans have quit paying money to look them over and Barney Dreyfuss may have to suffer a $50,000 loss for this year.

The Dodgers will be certain losers. The total may reach $100,000. They haven't been in the race from the outset, have not drawn well either at home or on the road, and the pay roll is too heavy.
 The Boston Braves are another team with a top-heavy pay roll, and whose receipts have been pitifully small from the outset of the season. The Hub city fans expected much from the Braves—went so far as to hope they would mix in the world series. But the Braves got away to a miserable start and they can't seem to hit their stride.
 The Phillies have been doing better in an attendance way than was looked for at the beginning of the season when the Feds seemed to have wrecked their club. But even at that the Phillies will do well if they quit the season under a $40,000 loss. The home-town fans attended in fairly large numbers when the season first opened and the Phillies showed surprising form, but since the slump it's a different story.
 In the American league, the Naps will suffer most. The Cleveland fans have quit them cold. The Naps are not drawing on the road and the combination of miserable attendance and huge salaries may set the Nap owners back about $150,000.
 The Yankees also will be certain losers, but they may escape with $50,000 or $75,000, owing to the fact that they drew a fairly well early in the season and that no matter what their position in the race they usually can draw a midweek crowd of from 3,000 to 5,000 at home. That's the fine feature of being in a town where there are so many transient fans.
 The closeness of the race among the other six teams in the league may cause two or three of the first six teams to escape with only a small loss. Earlier in the year it looked as if the Browns, Red Sox and White Sox were due for losses of from $30,000 to $70,000 each owing to Federal competition in Chicago and St. Louis.
 But the persistence with which the Browns and White Sox keep near the top, and the great spirit of the Red Sox has increased the recent attendance to such a point that the early losses may be partially overcome.
Quaker Fans Apathetic.
 Connie Mack's team has been leading nearly all the way but Connie's bank account won't be fattened much. The fans in Philadelphia seem apathetic. The attendance this year at the home games has averaged less than for the last four years and on the road the Athletics are not drawing overly well. The Athletics will make money but it won't be much.
 The Tigers and Senators, if they can keep in the fight, will clear a little.

Interest in Heavyweights Waning as White Hopes Fail in Tests
Unless Something Turns Up Johnson Will Never Be Dethroned

By RINGSIDE.
 NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Interest in the heavyweight situation on this side of the Atlantic is dwindling apace, and unless a Caucasian relieves a certain Jack Johnson of the title shortly, speculative manifestations will wane until it dies out entirely.
 For a time after Johnson dethroned Jeffries into submission at Reno, the big fellows commanded all the attention of the pugilistic element. The existence of other divisions never entered the minds of those who are the bulwarks of the game. They concentrated their time and energy upon developing a man capable of coping with the mighty Ethiopian.
 The boom in the heavyweight division was on. "White hopes" bobbed up like mushrooms, and went into seclusion quite as rapidly. "Beat Johnson" was the slogan of the pale-face, and a million dollars was to be the reward of the successful combatant.
 Then Johnson became implicated in a government trial and he blithely slipped to the other side of the big protecting ocean. The sportively inclined determined to forget Johnson. It was decided not to recruit him until there appeared a white man who had a chance with the bulky black.
 Johnson was forgotten. The "white hope" brigade soon was looked upon as a hopeless contemplation of beef and brawn, lacking wholly in initiative. They were shy brains. The crop was slaved thoroughly, and only three showed latent fighting ability. These were "Gunboat" Smith, Jess Willard and Frank Moran.
 Then the real tests. They occurred only recently over in Paris and London. In "Easy-Paré" Moran made a pitiable showing against Jack Johnson, while in a London ring Smith was declared a technical loser to Georges Carpentier, the white-heavyweight champion of Europe. True, the decision was said to be outrageous, but the fact remains a fact, and thereby lost all momentum. Even in his fight in New York, the "Gunboat" showed a tendency for unfair tactics. His transgressions of the rules were overlooked by vacillating referees, who lacked the courage of their convictions. "Gunboat" sadly missed his guess when he tried them on Eugene Corri, Europe's foremost arbiter.
 So Jess Willard alone remains of the American contingent. If the lathy rancher could only be induced to pay a visit to France, and get into the ring with Johnson, it is not at all unlikely that a new champion would emerge from the brawl.
 Willard is a pretty nearly every qualification of a champion. One thing in his disfavor is that he must be thoroughly aroused before he will put forth his best efforts. He is lackadaisical, and will not allow his temperament to become ruffled while an opponent is not annoying him with hard blows. Willard is a terrific puncher, and is extremely clever for a man of his height.
 Willard Might Do It.
 Willard would stand an excellent chance of defeating Johnson. One thing must be impressed on the lanky westerner in order that he may humble the champion. If he would only permit Johnson to do the leading, he could have a glorious chance of scoring a knockout.
 Johnson's forte lies in making his adversaries lead, and beating them to the counter. Only one man has ever been able to make Johnson abandon his watchful waiting tactics. That was Jack O'Brien. He outwitted Johnson, and when the Numidian tried to lead he floundered all over the ring. Johnson had to laugh at his own ludicrous efforts to land on O'Brien. Fortunately for "Black Jack," O'Brien had nothing more damaging than a wasp-like punch, so Jack weathered the six rounds.
 August 8 is the date set for the Dominion of Canada motorcycle championship race which are to be held at Kirkfield Park, Winnipeg.

on the season—probably $25,000 for each. Both have big pay rolls this year and in both towns the fans are not coming out in as great numbers as they did in other years when the teams were in the fight.
Losses Certain in Federal.
 In the Federal league it seems certain that each club will lose money. No individual estimate can be made but it looks as if the collective loss to eight clubs will be in the neighborhood of $800,000.
 The estimate is arrived at in this way: The Feds have about 250 men under contract. Some of those men are getting salaries from $3,000 to $12,000 a year. But many of the others—perhaps one-half—are getting around $1,000 to $2,000, making $2,500 the average salary for all the players, a rather high average. It means that the managers will have to pay out $625,000 in salaries. Adding to this another $75,000 to cover the cost of traveling expenses, interest on the investment in stands, salaries to officers, etc., it brings the total outlay up to $700,000.
$500,000 Estimate.
 The Feds play 134 games. That means four combats each day for 134 days, or 616 games during the season. Allowing 2,500 as the paid attendance for each of these games it would bring the total attendance to 1,540,000. With the average paid attendance at 50 cents it would mean that the Feds would take in through the sale about $770,000 during the year, giving the whole league a net loss of $230,000, or about $100,000 each.
 These figures may do a certain injustice to the Federal leagues because they may show the outlay larger than it really is, and the receipts smaller. But they are given from the best estimates available.
 Some of the clubs in the Federal league will lose more than others: The Kansas City, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis and St. Louis backers just now seem destined to suffer larger losses than the others. The losses in the other four cities will not be large.
Public Shares in Ford Profits
 DETROIT, Aug. 1.—Beginning today, Henry Ford will include the general public in the profit-sharing plan, inaugurated by him for the benefit of his employees at the beginning of the present year.
 This was the startling announcement made at the Ford factory and today newspapers in 500 leading cities of the United States will carry the same information.
 The Ford profit-sharing plan, so far as it relates to the workers of the mammoth automobile organization, is known now from one end of the world to the other. Briefly, it provides that every male employee over 22 years of age on the payroll of the parent corporation, whether at the home factory here or at any of the branches, shall receive at least $5 a day for his labor. This applies to the most humble sweeper and it means that the men higher up will receive a pro rata share of the company's profits.
 The newest angle to the Ford plan takes first the form of a reduction of $50 in the price of the Ford car, applying to the three models manufactured by the company. For instance, the town car, which has been selling for $750 f. o. b. Detroit, will sell for $690, beginning today. The five-passenger touring car, listed now at $850, has been cut to $790, and the runabout, listed at $500, is reduced to $440.
 In addition to this cut in the first cost of the machines, the Ford company has made the additional proposition that if a sales during the next 12 months, ending August 1, 1915, reach a total of 300,000 cars, every purchaser of those cars will receive, at the end of the stipulated period, a refund of from $40 to $40.
 That one refund will be for each car.

BROOKS AND WILDING MAKE CLEANSWEEP WITH DUTCH
 Kreuzer Lets Himself Out and Threatens to Defeat Wilding, but Couldn't Stand the Pace

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 1.—Australia's tennis pair, Norman E. Brooks and Anthony F. Wilding, made a clean sweep of the Davis cup matches on the courts of the Allegheny Country club at Scrivener today by beating Otto Froitzheim and Oscar Kreuzer, the Germans, in the singles. The real honor of the day fell to Kreuzer, who let himself out in the third set of his match against Brooks and played the famous Australian off his feet.
 Kreuzer could not hold the pace, however, and he had to let down on his sensational racket work, with the result that Brooks' final score was 6-4, 6-2, 6-5, 6-2.

BAD YEAR FOR UMPs PLAYERS ARE GETTING SASSY IN EARNEST

Mathewson Is Again Biggest Factor in Keeping the Giants in Lead

By FRANK G. MENKE.
 NEW YORK, July 24.—This is proving a bad year for the umpires in the American and National leagues. The players have taken to "sassing" the former class in a most unlikable manner, and the poor old umpires don't know what to do about it. Of course they are chasing the players from the game, with the best of intentions, but they aren't doing things as they used to in the good old days before the Feds came into being. You see, it doesn't pay a player to be chased from the game. In fact, he rather likes it. It means a vacation for him. But being fined and having said time deducted from his earnings is a different matter altogether. It wallows him in his most sensitive part. In other years the players were allowed that way and they had no recourse. This year it's a bit different. If a fine is assessed and a player thinks it unjust all he needs to do is to jump to the Feds.
 It's a grand little situation for the player, but think of—and sympathize with—the poor dears who officiate as umpires. The worst they have to do is to play with umpires' their best to chase those fellows from the game. And that, in the eyes of the players, is the best possible thing that could happen to him.

Springs Woodmen to Play Victor Monarchs Today

Colorado Springs camp No. 415, Woodmen of the World baseball team, today journeyed to Victor to return home with the Victor Monarchs. The local Woodmen have strengthened their team and expect to win from the district team for the second time. The game between the two clubs, two weeks ago was one of the best amateur battles seen here for some time and Victor is anxious to get revenge. Manager Reibschneider's lineup will be as follows: Fuller, c; Gauss, ss; Russell, cf; Manerhaus, p; Bundy, lf; Hulse, rf; Hombach, 3b; Denson, p; Campbell and Porter, utility.

shipped abroad on vessels now on high seas in danger of capture. Even these shipments leave a huge total of foreign credits to be satisfied. Today's statement of the New York banks showed in cold print the effect of the raid upon the American supply of gold. There was a decrease in cash holdings of more than $55,000,000, due principally to the loss of gold, and in place of the surplus reserves of $25,000,000 reported last Saturday, there was today a deficit of $17,000,000.

To meet these foreign claims with our serious overcommitment upon available financial resources, the bankers of New York were forced to take decisive action.

Several Conferences Held. Early in the day there was a conference of some of the leading bankers of New York, and later there was a meeting of the National Currency association of the city of New York, an organization provided by the Aldrich-Vreeland law. At this meeting, all arrangements were completed for the issuance of emergency currency in the week.

Although the possibility of issuance of emergency currency has been discussed quietly in Wall street, the action of the

New York association gave the first authoritative endorsement of these reports. A statement was made tonight by Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City bank, in which he said:

Vanderlip on Situation. "The action of the New York currency association in getting all the machinery ready for the issue of additional bank notes should give assurance that there will be no lack of an ample circulating medium. It is not possible to create a considerable amount of additional currency that is absolutely secure and in exactly the same form as the present national bank notes. It is obvious that, in the present disorganized financial situation in Europe, the demand for any additional circulation must be met from within ourselves.

The law offers a perfectly sound method of converting assets into circulating notes. There need be little fear, therefore, of any repetition of the conditions of 1907, when there was so much distress through the inability of banks to supply a circulating medium. The banks of the country, under this law, may take out $500,000,000 additional national bank notes. There is no probability that anything like that amount will be needed, or could be used, but the banks are in a position to make their assets liquid and to meet demands upon them in a perfectly satisfactory manner by increasing their national bank notes under the provisions of the act. The act provides a true expanding currency, and it is most fortunate, under all existing conditions, that it is available for the national banking institutions of the country.

Treasury Cooperating. The treasury is cooperating in every way possible. It has been forehanded in printing these notes in advance, so that they are immediately available, and the door is open for the creation of any reasonable amount of perfectly sound currency to meet whatever legitimate demands there may be for a circulating medium.

"Always, at this crop-moving season, there is a demand for a large amount of additional circulation, and it is not probable that, under the serious strain that the European situation has put upon us, that there may be more than an ordinary demand for money for circulation, and, while the financial condition of the country is sound and preeminently strong in the world today, nevertheless, it has been deemed wise to get this effective machinery ready to meet any eventualities that may arise.

Would Make Loan to England. None of the bankers would discuss the chances of the issuance of emergency currency in addition to the emergency currency. It was learned that no final decision had been reached on this point. The result will hinge upon the necessities of the situation as presented in the near future.

The suggestion for a loan of $100,000,000 to England was made at a meeting today of representatives of the principal foreign exchange houses. For the last two days business in foreign exchange has been virtually suspended and it was deemed essential to the financial interests of this country to devise some plan of restoring equilibrium.

It was proposed to ship the gold to England, or what met with more general approval, to hold the gold here. In the latter case this money would be placed to the credit of England, perhaps under the supervision of representatives of the British government. Another proposal was to purchase a special issue of British bonds to be underwritten here.

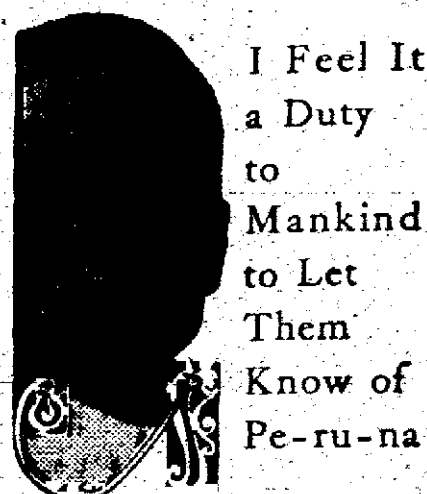

Crop Described Heavy. Annually at this season millions of bushels of grain are sent abroad and this year, on account of the war, the demand will be unusually heavy if it is possible to make shipments. In view of the uncertain conditions under which transatlantic shipment would be made and the demoralized condition of European finances, it was felt that the prospect of collecting Europe's bill for this export would be difficult.

Policy of Noninterference. From an authoritative source it was learned late tonight that President Wilson was strongly disinclined to take any steps toward mediation in Europe and in line with the traditional policy of the United States would pursue a course of absolute noninterference.

As American diplomats abroad have been active on their own initiative, sounding out the various governments about peace measures, cautionary telegrams were sent all locations and embassies requesting that no steps of importance in this direction be taken without previous consultation with the Washington government.

The products of the Klondike are shipped almost entirely to this country, the Canadian government levying an export duty of 24 per cent.

Catarrh of Head

I Feel It a Duty to Mankind to Let Them Know of Pe-ru-na

Mr. W. H. Chaney, R. F. D. 2, Sutherland, Pittsylvania Co., Va., writes: "For the past twelve months I have been a sufferer from catarrh of the head. Since taking four bottles of your Peruna I feel a different person altogether. The severe pains in my head have disappeared, and my entire system has been greatly strengthened. This is my first testimonial to the curative qualities of any patent medicine, but I feel it a duty to mankind to let them know of the greatest medicine on earth—Peruna—in my estimation for the above trouble."

These who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

"While we were boasting," said August Ulrich, a banker, "that we would absorb all the foreign sales of securities better than any other financial center, and that gold here was not at a premium, yet the American business man has to pay outrageous premiums on checks which, when presented abroad, could not be redeemed in silver, much less gold. We possess the intelligence and strength to pay Europe all we owe without undue injury to the American business man. We shall find the proper and, at the same time, honorable way to adjust our transactions, but we have got to stop these present exorbitant high rates."

Differences of opinion arose as to the advisability of the suggested loan to England. A committee of five was appointed to devise a plan and the committee held a stormy session. It was finally agreed that Mr. Ulrich and Max May, vice president of the Guaranty Trust company, should go to Washington tonight. A telegram was sent to Secretary McAdoo and it was understood a meeting with President Wilson had been arranged for tomorrow. Mr. Ulrich and Mr. May were to return to New York in time to meet the other members of the committee of five tomorrow night. The full committee, in turn, was to report to the main body early Monday morning before banking hours.

ernment by acting as the sole channel of communication between the powers may find an opportunity to assist in the settlement of the conflict by means of diplomacy.

President Wilson has not lost hope that a general conflict can be averted. Some of the official dispatches have suggested that the military measures being taken by some of the powers were precautionary and not definitely indicative of any intention actually to engage in hostilities.

The gravity of the situation was admitted in all the telegrams. News that Germany had declared war on Russia came officially while President Wilson and Secretary Bryan were in conference in the executive offices. Soon afterward Secretary Bryan hurried back to the state department and sent several long cables abroad, the nature of which was not disclosed.

Proclamation Withheld. To prevent paralysis in commerce, President Wilson and congressional leaders today agreed on legislation which would permit foreign ships to come under American register in case of a general war. No proclamation of neutrality would be issued by the United States until the situation develops more clearly. It was pointed out that there was no urgent need for the proclamation, as it was generally understood that the United States would remain neutral. The president will wait until a general proclamation can be issued, covering all countries involved. Officials of the government for unusually large sums of money for emergency relief. Secretary Bryan postponed his trip to Asheville, N. C., where he had planned to spend a week's vacation with Mrs. Bryan.

Postmaster General Burleson announced that thus far there had been no interruption or delay to mail service from the United States. Although German steamers sailing have been canceled, the American mail for Europe has been sent by other lines. Postmasters have been notified not to sell international postage money orders for unusually large sums because of the fear the money order system might be used for speculative purposes in the foreign exchange.

ican passenger, eager to catch a steamer at Antwerp, said he had paid 30 francs to an old railroad porter merely to put his trunk in the baggage car. At a late hour tonight it was said that the German ambassador was still in Paris.

Diplomatic Events for Day.

PARIS, Aug. 1.—Diplomatic events since yesterday afternoon can be stated briefly as follows:

Baron von Schoen, German ambassador to France, called on the French premier at 7 o'clock yesterday evening and formally notified him Germany had addressed an ultimatum to Russia, desiring to know by 12 o'clock today whether the St. Petersburg government would discontinue mobilization of the Russian army.

Baron von Schoen was directed by his government to ask what were the intentions of France should Russia's reply to Germany be a refusal to demobilize.

The German government fixed, before 1 p. m. today, as the period within which France must answer. Baron von Schoen called at the French foreign office at 11:49 a. m. to receive France's reply. Premier Viviani made an earnest appeal to the German ambassador, asking if Germany could not yet do something to avert war.

France Orders Mobilization.

The baron promised to communicate with Berlin and to return to the French foreign office at 4 p. m. which he did. The German reply, whatever it was, was submitted to the French cabinet council, which, within a few minutes afterward, ordered a general mobilization of the French army.

The date of the mobilization was set for tomorrow, but that only means the men must reach their regiments by tomorrow, so the mobilization begins immediately. But the men are called out in classes at intervals of days according to the year in which they entered the army.

Precise instructions are always in the possession of every man so that he may know what to do when a general mobilization is posted.

Popular Enthusiasm.

The wildest enthusiasm was manifested on the boulevards when the news of the ordering of the mobilization became known. Bodies of men formed in regular companies in ranks 10 deep and paraded the streets, waving the tricolor and other national emblems and cheering and singing the "Marseillaise" and the "Internationale," and throwing their hats in the air. On the sidewalks were many weeping women and children.

All the stores and cafes were deserted. The marching of the soldiers in the streets with the English and Russian and French flags flying, the singing of patriotic songs and the shouting of "On to Berlin" was much less remarkable than the general demeanor and cold resolution of most of the people.

Reservists Off to Front.

The response to the order of mobilization was instant and the stations of all the railways, particularly those leading to the eastward, were crowded with departing reservists. Many women accompanied the men until close to the stations, where, softly crying, farewells were said.

The troop trains departed at regular intervals and the Paris streets were quiet and nearly empty tonight. All the auto buses had disappeared, having been requisitioned by the army, to do coach work of the vehicles being removed and replaced with specially designed bodies. A large number of taxicabs, private automobiles and houses and cars also were taken over by the military for transport purposes.

POPE SYMPATHIZES WITH THE SERVIANS

ROME, Aug. 1.—A strict censorship has been established in Italy over dispatches to places abroad.

King Victor Emmanuel is keeping in close touch with events and is said to be in frequent direct communication with other European rulers, especially the German emperor.

The pope is said to have made great efforts to prevent the war, as since the recent concordat between the Vatican and Serbia, his feelings are very friendly toward that country. The signature of the concordat is said in some quarters to have been one of the causes of Austrian resentment against Serbia.

Speaking on the subject to the Austrian ambassador, the pontiff informed him that he considered the Austrian attitude toward the Servians concordat unfair, and added that he must protect his children wherever they are.

Many in Rome are withdrawing their money from the banks, owing to fear of a general European conflagration. The Italian government is preparing to meet any eventualities.

AMERICAN TOURISTS FLOCKING TO LONDON

Leave Continent When Unable to Get Money From Home on Account of War

LONDON, Aug. 1.—London is fast filling with Americans who have been compelled to forego their continental tours. Every cross-channel steamer from France and Belgium is filled with American tourists who, on the advice of their ambassadors, ministers or consuls, have left the continental cities and various resorts on a minute's notice for England, which country affords them their only chance of reaching home.

Ability to get money is another incentive for their desire to leave the continent. Express companies' checks, which Americans always use on foreign tours, cannot be converted into currency except at the highest rates of discounts.

A few of those who arrived early were able to get berths on the steamers sailing for New York, Boston and Canadian ports, but the majority joined the big crowd of Americans who are already filling London hotels.

Can't Get Check Cashed.

Later, a boat from the continent brought another large contingent of Americans, who felt satisfied until they discovered that their American checks were almost as useless in London as in the continental cities.

Such scenes were never before witnessed in the west end of London, where, ordinarily, the notes of any country in the world are changed without demur.

Prominent American residents met here today and organized a mission to assist their compatriots who may be stranded on the continent through the paralysis of the ordinary banking facilities.

Walter H. Page, the American ambassador and Irwin B. Laughlin, secretary of the embassy, have gone to the country for the week-end, and cannot be reached by telephone tonight, although several important communications are awaiting them here.

FASTERN ROADS TO GET ADVANCE

The commission saying that the operating income of the railroads in official classification territory, taken as a whole, is smaller than is demanded in the interest of both the general public and the railroads.

The present financial difficulties of the railroads are recognized by the commission as a problem not only of the railroads, but of the public, which it is the duty of the commission to settle. On this point the commission says, speaking of the need of the carriers for additional revenues, that "it is our duty and purpose to aid, as far as we legally may, in the solution of the problem as to the course carriers may pursue to meet the situation."

Territories Included.

The commission points out that the official classification territory embraces three rate territories, known as the New England territory lying east of the Hudson river; the trunk line territory lying between the New England territory and the Buffalo-Pittsburg line; and the Buffalo-Pittsburg line and the Mississippi river, and that the financial and traffic conditions of the railroads operating in these three rate territories differ widely. The commission finds that the rates in Central Freight association territory as a whole are not only lower than the rates in either trunk line or New England territory, but they are lower than the rates in any other part of the United States, if the average freight rate had been

as high on the Central Freight association territory lines as on the roads in trunk line territory, the former would have earned in 1913 $56,000,000 more than they actually did, and that the 28 representative roads in Central Freight association territory, which are most in need would have earned $29,000,000 more.

Roads Want to Cooperate.

The commission concludes its report by saying:

"We may justly feel proud of the development of our transportation system. Despite occasional discreditable chapters, the history of our railroads has been marked by great achievements. There is a growing spirit among the carriers of cooperation in the enforcement of the law. With the application of correct and helpful accounting, the establishment of sound business methods, and a better understanding by both carriers and the public of their mutual obligations, to which we believe this investigation had contributed, the future is full of promise. We see no reason why our American railroads should not enjoy a large measure of prosperity consistently with just and reasonable rates."

In his dissenting opinion, Commissioner Daniels holds that the 6 per cent advance should have been accorded generally. This opinion is based on the inequity of the carriers' present rates, to afford a fair return on their property and to attract such additional investments as are required in the interest of the public. He qualifies this conclusion, however, in cases where the carriers sought a higher per cent advance under the guise of an increase of 5 cents per ton, and also in the case of certain specified commodities where existing rates were specifically shown to be fully compensatory. He protests that the decision has been unnecessarily delayed by merging with the issue of rate advances an irrelevant inquiry into methods by which carriers may conserve their revenues without advancing their rates. He contends also that the advances meagerly allowed in central territory and denied wholly as between the two regions, will prove insufficient to afford a fair and reasonable return to the carriers for the services they perform.

McChesed's Dissent.

Commissioner McChesed's dissent, a brief one, also concluded this way: "Viewed from a commercial standpoint, a physical transportation standpoint, and in the light of the facts of record, I am convinced that the reasons which impelled the commission to approve certain changes in Central Freight association rates apply equally to trunk line rates, and that the transportation conditions in the two territories are not so unlike as to indicate the wisdom of dissimilar treatment of the rates proposed by the carriers in the entire official classification territory."

4,000 Spectators Witness Historical Pageant Rain Fails to Stop Children in Their Features

When the parade of all the costumed children of the four parks, headed by Ouray and his Indians, marched across the green grass stage of the Monument Valley park playground yesterday afternoon more than 4,000 spectators,
children and grownups, burst into applause. The grownups, dressed in appropriate costumes, were a mass of color with the feathered head-dresses of the Indians, the gay bandannas of the ranchers and settlers, the uniforms of General Palmer, Pike and his officers, the Columbine girls and the bright flags of the 38 children to represent the admission of Colorado into the Union.

Mayor C. L. McKesson, J. L. Bennett,
secretary of the playground commission, and other city and county officers witnessed the pageant. The spectacle was a great success and although the rain did its best to interrupt the proceedings, and actually did postpone the Columbine drill, it was unquestionably worthy of all the work given to it. Moving pictures of the different scenes were taken by the Lubin company. The grounds were roped off, police and every preparation was made to make the affair one of the most attractive events of the summer.

Colorado Enters.
One of the features of the pageant
was the scene depicting the admission of Colorado into the Union, when the tiny tot, the Colorado boy, in the person of Arthur Murray III, the 1-year-old son of Supervisor Arthur Murray, Jr., dressed as a Columbine, was drawn into the arena in a small coach by Governor Routt. He represented Colorado, and is a native Colorado Springs
boy. This appealed to the audience, even if his chubby fist had to be helped to pin the thirty-eighth star to the flag.

Music for the parade was furnished by the Midland band. The Indian period with Buckskin Charlie, Ouray and Chipeta, and many others came first.
The dances attracted great attention,
being the genuine Indian dances,
coached by J. A. Jeancon.
Generals Palmer and Pike with Kit
Carson and his scouts were the next characters to appear. They gave a realistic representation of the discovery of the famous mountain and the laying out of the town site. The rain managed to put a stop to the next number on the program and the Columbine drill was postponed until Wednesday. The mining period came in for a good share of applause with the search for gold and placer mining.
Gold nuggets were distributed to all of the spectators who seemed as pleased as if they had been sold a gold brick.
The finale of the pageant came with the admission of Colorado to the Union when Arthur Murray III, pinned
the last star to the flag. The 37 other little kiddies each carried flags with the name of the state they represented.
This ended the day as the kiddies were too wet to enter the games with any great enthusiasm.

In the morning the teams from Dorchester and Monument Valley parks had a ball game which the latter team won by the score of 8-5.
The Columbine drill, which the rain stopped, will be given Wednesday at Monument Valley park. The little girls, costumed in lavender and white, made a brave attempt to stage the drill even in the rain, but it proved too much for them. The games and races that were to have been held yesterday in the afternoon were also postponed until Wednesday and will be held in the Monument Valley park playground on that day.

Pageant Cost Only $20.
That the pageant proved beyond a doubt, the possibilities of the city
parks, is the contention of Supervisor Murray, Jr. An outlay of not more than $20 was expended on the pageant
for the costumes and scenery.

The kiddies are content and they didn't care about the rain. They were wandering home yesterday after the pageant and the streets were full of "Indians" and "miners" for a time.
"Rain? Sure it rained," said one youngster. "But what did it care?"
All the costumes and scenery were turned over to them after the pageant
and they are mighty happy little people in the Pikes Peak region today, with their tents, camps, costumes and flags.

SEVEN BRIDGES IN COUNTY WASHED OUT BY HEAVY RAIN

Cheyenne Creek Did Most Damage;
Main Roads Not Damaged Much;
Rushing Repairs in County

As a result of Thursday night's storm, according to reports which have been gathered by the county commissioners, seven county bridges were washed out by flood waters. Two of these were in the Divide district, and five in the Dryland and canon district.
Cheyenne creek, running from the canons through Dryland, was relatively higher than any of the other creeks
in the region, and besides carrying out the bridges, did much damage to the residence properties through which it runs. The county is rushing the work of repairing the road and bridge damage. There were no washouts on main roads to either Pueblo or Denver, in El Paso county, according to announcements by Road Overseer W. L. Lar-bee, and both highways are in fairly good condition.

PRECIPITATION RECORDS WERE BROKEN IN JULY

Total Rainfall 5.06 inches; Temperature
Remained Cool, Mean Being 66
Degrees; Two Clear Days

Precipitation records for the last 35 years were broken during July, according to the report of the Colorado college weather bureau for last month.
Due to the heavy rain of Thursday night the total precipitation for July was 5.06 inches, the mean for the last 35 years being 3.28 inches. The heaviest rainfall in July in the history of the bureau was in 1875, when 6.67
inches fell.
July was an exceptionally cool
month, the mean temperature being 66 degrees. The highest temperature of the month was 86, July 13, and the lowest 41 on July 17. The lowest temperature on July 17, the month was 37 in 1874.
Records for the month for the month were not up to past marks. There were only two clear days, 17 being partly cloudy and 11 cloudy. The mean wind ve-

Tulsa Folks Will Stage Big Celebration Thousand Visitors to Hold Picnic Thursday

When state picnics were so much in vogue in the Pikes Peak region several years ago, Oklahomans, boosters as great as native Californians, placed the picnic of their commonwealth at the head of the list of those giving successful outings. In numbers, in excellence and novelty of program, in every thing, they were among the first.
But if Oklahoma led the states, Tulsa is now leading Oklahoma. That thriving city has gone its sister communities just one better, and incidentally has inaugurated a new type of picnic

the city picnic. And all because about a dozen real live wires are just as great boosters away from home as they are in their own chamber of commerce rooms.
Tulsans, summering in the Pikes Peak region—there are more than 1,000 here
—will give a picnic at Stratton park
next Thursday from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m.
Then the Oklahomans will join the Chamber of Commerce in its barbecue at the park during the afternoon. The evening will be spent at the Midland band and concert at the park or perhaps in dancing. Arrangements as yet are incomplete.

The dozen live wires lived up to their name last evening when they made all temporary arrangements for the picnic in about five minutes. Hardly had the idea of giving such an outing occurred
to them than they were busy planning.
They intend to meet in the city, possibly at the intersection of Pikes Peak and Cascade avenues or some other suitable location, and, headed by a band—they won't consider the picnic
complete without a band parade through the business district, then to Stratton park. Each one is expected to provide his own lunch.

After the picnic lunch, Mayor Charles L. McKesson will make a welcoming address, and speakers from the local Chamber of Commerce if they can be secured, and from Tulsa will talk. The program has not been definitely decided upon. Several unique and entertaining features are promised. The men who are planning to secure an orchestra and have dancing.
There are 80 automobiles from Tulsa
in Colorado Springs at present. With an average of five people to the car,

this would give 400 Tulsa motorists along in the region. More than this number came by rail and are spending the summer in this vicinity. A hundred or more are in Denver, but before they left Tulsa told the crowd coming here that if the Oklahomans decided to give a picnic or "pull any stunts" to let them know so they could move down and enjoy the excitement.
This the Tulsans intend to do.

Residents of Tulsa are asked to meet at the bandstand in North park to morrow morning at 10 o'clock to complete plans for the picnic. The live wires hosting the outing will be there in force and intend to install some of their spirit into their fellow-townsmen, in case such a thing becomes necessary.

At the meeting tomorrow a Tulsa club
also will be organized and officers elected. As full plans for the picnic will be outlined it is the desire that everyone from Tulsa attend the meeting.

U. S. TO MAKE TIMBER PROBE

SEEK TO PREVENT THE ENORMOUS WASTE

Thorough Investigation of the Industry Will Be Undertaken Soon

By SIDNEY ESPEY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—An investigation of the supply and exploitation of the timber in the United States, with the object of revealing methods of preventing the present waste, has been determined upon by the department of commerce and the department of agriculture. The inquiry will be conducted jointly by the two departments and will cover the entire United States.

Advance notice of the investigation
asserts that the study of the timber supply is to be undertaken in the belief that the methods used in exploiting timber resources and the restoration of normal and healthy conditions in the industries which convert timber into usable products vitally concern
the public at large.

The investigation by the department of commerce and the department of agriculture has features of added interest because of a report recently made by the commission of corporations, who found that about 1,600 men own one-twentieth of the landed area of the United States and that most of this land is in big timber tracts.

Outline of Investigation.
In a joint statement issued by the departments of commerce and agriculture, the forthcoming investigation
is outlined as follows:

"One of the conditions which, in the opinion of the secretaries of the two departments, makes this study of immediate importance is the fact that the United States, which now contains 3,000,000,000 feet of standing timber, now reducing its stock of stumpage at the rate of 60,000,000 feet or more annually. In spite of this limited timber supply, lumbermen are now unable to market much of the poorer grades,
so they, therefore, leave in the woods
or burn in their mills from one-third to one-half of the material in the trees. Poor varieties of timber often are not cut at all, but are left to be burned in the slash fires which usually follow logging. It is believed that some of this waste is preventable, and much more. It is hoped there can be a saving under improved conditions of marketing and use of wood.

"One of the objects of the study is to lessen this total waste which, if allowed to continue, will be felt sooner or later by all who use wood. Because of these and other existing conditions in the timber and lumbering districts, the secretaries of both departments feel there is need to devise betterments in the interest alike of the forest-using industries and the consuming public."

Object of Inquiry.
The more important elements in the project of the departments are as follows:

"The studies will seek to establish the essential facts relating to supply, exploitation and marketing of timber,
both at home and abroad, and to analyze the underlying causes of present unsatisfactory conditions. The aim will be to deal broadly with the various problems, and to indicate as far as it may be practicable, measures which should be adopted by the industry itself or by the public in relation to the industry."

"The studies will be conducted directly by the forest service in the department of agriculture and the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, with the cooperation of the bureau of corporations and the bureau of standards, of the department of commerce,
within their special fields."

"Among the related industrial and business questions which will be considered are the effects upon lumber production of speculation in standing timber and the carrying charges on private stumpage; the extension of markets at home and abroad; and the marketing of lumber produced in other countries and of materials used for the same purposes."

"The inquiry has to do not only with the thrifty use of the present timber supply, but also with the possibility of applying forestry in the future management of private timber lands."

MONEY SOON READY FOR CROP MOVEMENT

Speculation Will Not Be Allowed by Banks, Declares
Secretary McAdoo

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Secretary
McAdoo announced tonight that the $50,000,000 which the treasury will deposit in national banks to be used in the movement of crops would be available as soon as they complied with conditions outlined today. The money will be deposited in installments of from 25 to 50 per cent. Allotments by states probably will be announced next week.

Conditions outlined in the department's letter to the banks stated in part:
It is indicated that such deposits are made to prevent or mitigate the financial tension so common at this period of the year incident to the movement of the crops and the funds
by the banks will be used in good faith for this purpose and not for speculative or other transactions. It is not intended that such funds shall be utilized by the depositaries selected to discharge their obligations to other banks, such as rediscounts or bills payable, but in order that the legiti-mate purposes of the deposit may be accomplished, that banks receiving same will be expected to extend to the banks in smaller towns such accommodations as may be consistent with sound and conservative principles of banking, and in all cases the rate of interest charged shall be moderate and reasonable.

been sent out 1,000 membership

cultural committee, and one by the trade and industries committee. In addition to which there have been four trips on road business.

These figures, compiled by Miss

of routine work handled every day in this office.

PRES. WILSON MAY PREVENT STRIKE ON WESTERN RAILROADS

Both Sides Promise to Give Arbitration Plans Another Consideration

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—In an attempt to avert the threatened strike of 65,000 firemen and engineers on the western railroads, President Wilson today appealed to representatives of employees and employers to accept the settlement plan proposed by the federal board of mediation and conciliation. He board promised consideration for his proposal by both sides. They will give him a definite answer on Monday.
Hope for a peaceful settlement was held tonight by administration officials
because the railroad managers' committee promised to think again over the federal mediators' plan, which they had rejected once. The committee planned to meet informally tomorrow.
According to statements by W. S. Carter and Warren S. Stone, representing the firemen and engineers, the employees of the road have already accepted in principle the mediation board's plan. The president asked the railroad managers to do likewise.

Remain in Washington.
Representatives of both sides promised the president to remain in Washington until Monday. The railroad managers said they would reach a decision by then whether the plan would be accepted, and the president told the employees' representatives he would communicate the outcome to them. The plan of the mediators is to restore the schedules in effect prior to October 1913, with certain amendments and riding, and to submit to arbitration the question of wages.

The president devoted his entire attention and evening to considering the strike question. He saw the representatives of the managers and of the employees separately and later held a conference with Judges Chambers and Knapp of the federal mediation board.
In meeting the managers' committee,
President Wilson made a brief speech,
pointing out to them that the situation was abnormal because of the war in Europe and that no pains should be spared in seeking to reach a settlement.
He told them he was making efforts to increase the American merchant marine in order to take care of shipments of farm products, and that these efforts would be worthless if a strike on the western railroads was declared.

Labor Day Celebration Planned by Union Men

The general committee appointed by the Federated Trades council to arrange for a celebration of Labor day for the Pikes Peak region, last night
at a meeting in Carpenters hall outlined general plans for the day's events. These will include a parade in the morning, a picnic lunch at noon
in Monument Valley park, and sports and speeches in the afternoon in the park. These plans for the celebration may be modified later, as committees from each union in the city will be asked to cooperate with the general committee in making the arrangements,
and the final outline of the events will be determined on in connection with these committees.
The parade in the morning, however, will be a typical Labor day parade, and all working men will be asked to join in it. As a part of the afternoon celebration, the general committee already in making plans to secure two or three good speakers to give addresses. The general committee will meet again at 7:30 o'clock
next Thursday night in Carpenters hall before the meeting of the Federated Trades council. The committees from each of the unions of the city will be asked to meet with the general committee at that time.

WARBURG SUBMITS TO SEVERE GRILLING AT HANDS OF BRISTOW

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Paul M.
Warburg of New York, President Wilson's nominee to the federal reserve board, was examined by the senate banking committee for four hours today. His examination will be continued Monday.
Senator Bristow of Kansas was the only committee member to question
Mr. Warburg. He probed in detail into the financial opinions of the banker
and his connection with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. officially. Senator Bristow made use of the report of the house
select committee which listed Kuhn, Loeb & Co. as one of the firms in the combination "controlling money and of the committee said a favorable re-

Noted Colorado Springs Vocal Teachers See Movement Started by Them Grow Into Great National Campaign

Legislatures of New York, Ohio, Minnesota and Oregon to Consider Establishment of Standard of Requirements for Teachers of Voice Embodying Standard Tone Theory First Advocated by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Brown Teachers' Associations behind Movement Other States Following Into Line.

By ALBERT GARDNER

What do you know about voice culture? Nothing at all is the answer, unless you happen to be the one man in a thousand that thinks he does. You wouldn't feel embarrassed. On that great day when Gabriel produces the perfect tone from the silver trumpet, and St. Peter asks the assembled vocal teachers of all the ages that self-same question under conditions that have everything but the straight, honest, goodness, truth, mind you—you'll have plenty of company among the teachers themselves—at least, so well-qualified members of the profession tell me—in the strictest confidence, you understand.

What do you care about that? Yes, I heard you better, you said it. I felt it coming. Nothing at all is the answer to that, too—but wait a minute. You may change your mind when I translate into that most modern of tongues—the language of dollars and cents. In the United States alone there are a good many thousand persons who will tell you that they are teachers of voice culture. Some of them make as much a year that the income tax man sends in their schedules by registered mail, either for that matter, we've produced our share of bright lights in the musical sky. Of course, they didn't hang around here long after they began to twinkle. The surest call for art is the jungle of gold—and it was away for a field that is broader, not to say more nourishing. Anyhow, they went. That didn't leave Howard Brown, however. If there weren't any real Carusos and Melbas around, he'd create a few—so he began teaching the hopefuls out here what he had taught the artists in New York. If those aforementioned artists wanted more of his training, they could take their choice of railroad routes and journey to Colorado Springs. And some of them did, too. It was rough on the artists, but great for the hopefuls. I've never dared to ask Brown what he thought about it.

Now it's perfectly clear to you—or it ought to be why I sent for you—my intention to take me on Wood avenue, the new Brown studio is. The conductor let me off at Del Norte street and I strolled over. I love to stroll about town blocks. I was wiping my feet on the door mat—it was after one of those unusual rains—preparatory to ringing the doorbell, when I stayed sum of money spent each year in this country alone for voice culture. Thousands and thousands of persons who have no intention of becoming public singers are having their voices trained, solely for the pleasure they derive in being able to sing well and for the pleasure they can give their friends by this accomplishment. Millions are paid to vocal teachers every year. A vast amount of this money is absolutely wasted. It goes into the pockets of rank fakers who have attached themselves to the profession because, under existing conditions, it is practically impossible for the average person to distinguish between the true and the false. That's the meaning of this movement for a standard of requirements. It's a movement for the protection of the public as well as for ourselves. As you know, New York, Ohio, Minnesota and Oregon will have the matter up before their respective legislatures at the next session. The measures are practically certain of passage. The music teachers' associations are solidly behind them. In practically every other state in the Union the campaign is well under way and it's only a question of time for the vocal teacher. Do you see that? I gazed regretfully at the end of my cigar and confessed that I did not.

"Well," said Brown, making a fresh start, "let's get back to what I mean by the mechanics of singing. You've got to understand that before we can go ahead. Now, 15 years of research has definitely established this important point—certain physiological conditions absolutely govern the production of tone. The position of the tongue, the relaxation of certain muscles in the throat, and looseness of the jaw, all directly affect the quality of the voice. Until these physiological conditions are created in the singer it is impossible to tell how good a tone that singer is capable of producing. Many a person who never dreams of singing now would find himself possessed of a good voice if these purely physical conditions were brought about. Now, I don't mean that anybody can be turned into a great singer simply by changing a few muscular conditions in the throat. The voice, naturally, must be there to say nothing of the psychological development of the aesthetic side. Here I ceased winking my jaw and trying to ascertain what I could do with my tongue. Also I desisted from further calculation of how much 50 guaranteed appearances at $3,000 per appearance could be made to yield in one brief operative season. I retired much sooner than I had anticipated.

"Neither do I mean," Brown went on, "that good tone production is all that is necessary to a singer. There is much beside, but it belongs in that psychological realm that you won't let me stray into. The point is this—the first step in singing is tone production. Ideal tone production can be brought about only when these certain physiological conditions are present. In some persons they exist naturally; in others they must be almost entirely created. In practically all persons there are defects, sometimes glaring, sometimes comparatively trivial, but that must be remedied before the best tone production of which they are capable can be accomplished. Clearly, the first duty of a vocal teacher is to know what these physiological conditions are and how they can be brought about. That's the prime factor in the standard of requirements. 'That sounds reasonable,' I remarked. 'How do you go about acquiring this knowledge?' Brown smiled. I feared that there was a trace of amused tolerance in that smile. But then, I may have been mistaken.

Fifteen Years of Research.

"Well," said Brown, "I took me the better part of 15 years to acquire it. Shall I tell you what I did? I initiated that I was in a receptive mood. When we first commenced to work out, we sang a short action song. I continued, 'You thought we would get our information in regard to these physical conditions quite readily from the great singers of the day. We started with Caruso. We asked him how he produced his tone. His answer was a simultaneous lift of his shoulders and eyebrows. 'When I sing,' he said, 'it is like an automobile going along the road. If there is a hill to climb, I put on more power. If the road is level, I just keep the machine going.' That's illuminating, wasn't it? We explained what he meant about muscular action. Caruso looked blank. 'Loudly,' he told me when I take a long breath to duck my head. 'So I duck my head. Whether it does any good or not.' Another expressive shrug and that's all the information we got. Well, that's about all the satisfaction we got from any of them. They tried honestly to explain, but they didn't get very far. When it came right down to brass tacks, they simply didn't know. So we started to find out for ourselves."

Associated with us was Dr. Frank E. Miller of New York, then, as now, Caruso's consultant. Dr. Miller was the one man in the world for the work. He, himself, had been a public singer. Afterward he became eminent as a throat specialist, concentrating largely upon singers. It was an ideal combination. Dr. Miller undertook the physiological side of the work. The scientific, almost mathematical, part was in the hands of the late Prof. W. S. Hallock, who held the chair of physics at Yale, and later went to the Carnegie Institute to conduct original research into elemental phonetics. Mrs. Brown and myself undertook that portion of the work that lay in the sphere of a vocal teacher.

It was at this point that there flashed into my mind the dedication of W. J. Henderson's famous book, "The Art of the Singer." Henderson is the musical critic of the New York Sun, and some pumpkin in the musical world. In his dedication he wrote: "The author desires to express his indebtedness for important information to Madame Nordica and Sembrich, and for a practical demonstration of a worth beyond estimate by M. Jean de Reszke. He also owes thanks to Mr. Henry Howard Brown for his enlightening physiological illustration of the operation of the larynx."

The last sentence used to puzzle me a good deal. It's become perfectly clear now. But I'm keeping you from Brown.

Great Artists Join Work.

"Now, while we haven't been able to get much information from the great opera singers," Brown went on, "we felt sure that nature had looked after those physiological details in their cases. These great stars were producing their tones hitherto by the means of the vocal mechanism. The fact that they didn't know it didn't alter the facts in the case whatsoever. So, as our first step we selected four great artists whose tone production most closely approached the ideal—a soprano, a contralto, a tenor, and a baritone. These artists were Melba, Schumann-Heink, Caruso and Battistini. I looked up with a question mark on my face. Brown caught it. 'Battistini,' he explained, 'is the great Italian singer

He has never been heard in this country because, as he himself frankly confesses, he is afraid to cross the Atlantic. But he is well known at La Scala, at Covent Garden, in Paris, Berlin and St. Petersburg. I consider him the greatest living baritone.' That settled it with me. If Brown thinks Battistini is the Ty Cobb of the Baritone League, I'm satisfied.

Brown continued: "Dr. Miller ascertained the physical conditions reigning in the tone-producing organs of these great singers and found a remarkable similarity throughout. Then we obtained phonograph records and by means of a delicate instrument we registered a tracing of the action of the sound waves on a sheet of smoked paper—on other words, made a chart of the tones. A mathematical equation, worked out by Professor Sembrich and Dr. Miller, resolved each tone into its constituents and determined exactly the proportion of pitch, power and quality. Then the physiological conditions obtaining at various times were compared with the record of the tone produced at that exact moment and ultimately we found the precise physical conditions under which the best tone was produced. This physical condition was the same in all four singers. We had proved our theory as far as these four persons went. And, then, these were exceptional men and women. We still had to prove the theory as applied to singers in general."

"We took other singers, whose tone was markedly inferior to that of the artists we had been working with, and made records of the voices in the same selections that had been used in the cases of Melba, Schumann-Heink, Caruso and Battistini. A chart was made of each voice and the result compared with the chart of the great singers—the soprano with Melba, the contraltos with Schumann-Heink, the tenors with Caruso, and the baritones with Battistini. Also, of course, Dr. Miller made a thorough study of the physiological conditions. The closer the physiological conditions compared, the closer the charts compared."

"Bringing About Ideal Conditions. Then, with Dr. Miller's help, Mr. Brown and I set ourselves to evolve various exercises designed to bring about physical conditions as close as possible to those we had settled on as ideal, and eventually we reached a point where we were able to make marked progress towards creating the physical conditions necessary wherever nature had been amiss or the singer had acquired bad methods."

"All this time, of course, we were taking new records of the various voices in the original selections, and making new tone charts. The closer we drew the ideal physical condition, the better the chart. We finally reached a point where the voice was absolutely conformed to the standard of requirements mental in the standard of requirements demanded of their state legislatures by the teachers throughout the country."

"Let me be sure I've got this straight," I said. "As I understand it, this long series of experiments determined exactly what muscular action is necessary in order to produce tone. It also demonstrated just how that muscular condition could be induced when faulty conditions prevailed. Is that it?"

"That's it exactly," said Brown, and those long strings constitute the entire mechanics of singing. The voice is the instrument. The tone-producing organs are the instrument case. To find out what sort of an instrument you possess—it is necessary to open the case. It does it. It's not how fine an instrument one has—it's not how good as long as it is shut up in the case. A good many vocal cords are locked up tight; until you pry off the lid you cannot tell what kind of instruments they contain. Clearly, the fundamental requisite of a teacher of vocal music is a knowledge of how to open the box."

"And that's the knowledge that the music teachers of the country are demanding in their essential standard of requirements," I added. "As regards vocal teachers, yes, broadly speaking," replied Brown. "But that's only a fundamental, you must remember. It's only the mechanics of singing. It's the science of the game. Science is knowledge; art is doing. A combination of this scientific knowledge linked with the broad and effective—upright of the old Italian—

AN UP-TO-DATE PRAYER

Anne Sherrill Baird, in Southern Woman's Magazine.
From Berlin comes a news item to the effect that the German Lutheran church from now on will contain by command of the kaiser, a special prayer for airplanes and aeroplanes in the imperial service. The regular prayer for the armed forces, as altered to include aircraft, is as follows:
"May it please thee to protect the royal army and all the imperial forces by land and sea; also the ships upon the sea and all the aircraft now voyaging."

Anything pertaining to war has always appealed powerfully to the imagination of man. Soldiers are prayed for by bookkeepers, are not. A battleship is "christened," but a cook stove is not christened, nor a churn.
Fighting, but, praying, seem to go together, but, work, business, health, prayer, nor hymn. Thousands have and "Onward, Christian Soldier," but no body ever chanted, "Onward, honest plowman!" The Christian is pictured as marching "as to war," not searching as to work.

The number of articles handled by the Egyptian postoffice department during 1912 is estimated at 21,619,491 by land and sea; also the ships upon

MR. AND MRS. H. HOWARD BROWN

Colorado Springs Vocal Teachers Who Started the Movement for the Standard Tone Now Indorsed by Teachers' Associations Throughout the Country as a Subject for Legislative Action.

mail. Others don't do quite so well, but there are none so far as the records show, that wouldn't cause a newspaper man—this one, anyhow—serious to consider the advisability of merely writing about it. In plain words, this country spends a good many millions of dollars each year in having its voice cultivated. That's more interesting, isn't it? Great old word—that "million." Never fails to hook the attention of the great American citizen. Whether we're talking of money or the number of children a house-ful can have in a month. But let's get back to this voice thing.

Howard Brown and the New Movement.
I happened to know a little about these millions were spending on our voice every year, and so an item caught my eye in the Associated Press dispatches to the effect that the New York State Music Teachers' Association had adopted an essential standard of requirements for its members and would ask the legislature to enact this standard into law. A little later I read that Ohio had done the same thing, then Minnesota, then Oregon—that illustrious line of the initiative and referendum. "Say," I thought, "if being my want to be acquainted with myself, 'this thing's getting to be a regular habit.' And as I am very keen for new habits, I feel myself to discover what it was all about. Very naturally, this turned my face toward Howard Brown."

Now, perhaps you don't know Howard Brown—that's because you don't know anything about music. Brown and Mrs. Brown, who was Dora Louise Topping before she took the fatal plunge, belonged in that class of vocal teachers that I was speaking about a moment ago—the ones that get their income tax schedules by registered mail. That little old Topping-Brown studio in New York was a place crowded with opera stars and concert singers and public speakers waiting around until that Topping-Brown combination got ready to fix up their voices. It seems that they had worked out a system of tone production that was about the finest little thing of its kind running loose. It is the only case on record where the T.B.s are known to be good for the police. Now, I don't want you to take my word for this—because all the Carnegie libraries in the world couldn't hold what I don't know about tone production. My information comes from Katherine Fleke, and she ought to know—had the reputation of being America's greatest contralto. "Greatest teacher of tone production in the world," Mrs. Fleke said to me one day when speaking of Howard Brown. "Some heart-act," I opined. "Oh, no," replied the singer, "he's a vocal teacher." I let it go at that. Well, anyway, that was the situation at the Topping-Brown studio in New York. There were quite considerable doing around there to make so that Brown finally had to come to Colorado for well, everybody knows, what you come to Colorado for.

Where We Got the Benefits.
He lay around here chasing the cure for a while, then, after a few months, he began to sit up and take notice that the little old Colorado climate was just about as much of a benefit to his life as he was in it. He began to feel his oats again—and feeling his oats—saw just one thing with Howard Brown. Yes, you got it—that's just what he did. Of course, there isn't much of a Derby day crowd of opera stars and concert singers hanging around these parts (I left out the public speakers on purpose—I'm no fool). But, at that, there's no small shakes at all. For a small town, or a big my hand—or was it my feet? I guess I stayed there both simultaneously and all together. Out from that studio floated the grandest note you ever heard—big and round and sweet and high, say you could have turned the spotlight on the Peak straight up into the clouds and it wouldn't have located that note. It was a wonder. "Huh," I said, "registering disgust. 'We're a live bunch of newspaper scouts in this town. Melba in our midst and nary a soul of us knows a thing about it. So I hung around waiting to see the diva. (see Webster, or Webster, if you haven't Webster), or Webster, to see the diva come out, but no one appeared but a little slip of a girl. I waited a while but there wasn't any more singing so I went up and pushed the bell."

The Enthusiastic Mr. Brown.
"Hello, old man," said Brown, "come in. I had something on my chest and I had to get it off. 'Say,' I said, with my best bluff, 'who was that singing just now?' 'Why,' said Brown, 'that was Agnes Neuer. You must have met her coming out if you were here when she was singing. Aw, no, not that girl. Frightled. The next that took that little girl's high note. 'That's the diva,' said Brown. 'Glad Agnes Neuer. She's got a very nice voice and she's coming along first-rate. I wouldn't be surprised if she really amounted to something later on.' Brown's a regular bear for enthusiasm when he gets well under way. 'But that high note,' I ventured, 'that was some peach.' 'Yes,' replied Brown, 'we're developing that very nicely. That was F. in all.' 'Test?' I answered, trying to look intelligent. Brown took pity on me. 'That's F. above high C,' he explained, 'it's really quite a remarkable note when properly done. She's getting along. We may produce another grand opera star yet.' That's Brown. A good many other vocal teachers would have told me she was the greatest thing since Adeline Patti and that the Metropolitan would be breaking its neck to get her inside of six months. And that little mental comparison reminded me of what I had come for.

"Mr. Brown," I said, "what's all this hullaballoo the music teachers of the country are making over an essential standard of requirements?" Brown looked a little pained. "The hullaballoo," he replied, "marks the biggest step forward our profession has made in years. It means that before any one can put his 'before the public as a teacher of music he must qualify before a board of experts, acting under the authority of the law, which will determine whether he is competent to practice. It means that the profession is going to be put on exactly the same basis as that of the physician and the lawyer. Suppose anyone who had a mind to could hang out his shingle as a doctor? Suppose anyone could commence the practice of law by merely opening an office and announcing his intention to do so? That's what's been going on in our profession for years."

"Separating Sheep From Goats.
"And this movement," I interpolated, "to show how readily I had grasped this intricate question, 'is to separate the sheep from the goats, eh? Do you expect to get many goats, Mr. Brown?' 'I'd hate to tell you how many by the time we've covered the country,' he answered. 'As the profession is made up now, especially as regards teachers of the voice, there is a nucleus of persons well qualified to teach, a certain amount of those who would be well qualified with more or less added preparation, and a vast number of absolute charlatans. I imagine that not one layman in a thousand has any idea of the vocal mechanism of singing. The mechanics of singing. 'All right,' said Brown, 'we'll stick to the mechanics then. After all, it's only in the mechanics that we can establish a standard of requirements, and that's what we're trying to get at. I stuck a moment ago that you had struck pretty close to home. I'll tell you why. Standardization of tone production—standardization of the mechanics of singing—is the goal for which Mrs. Brown and myself have been fighting for the last 15 years. We can safely lay claim to being the pioneers in the movement. Mrs. Brown was at it before I was. I began work as her assistant. Now, standardization of tone production will establish a standard of requirements

The funeral will be held at 9:30 o'clock this morning from the home, 1522 Cheyenne road, and the body will be buried in Evergreen cemetery.
